

Canada offers guided outdoors tours

A vacation in Canada, to many people, means a vacation outdoors. Getting away from civilization in this vast land is easy. The problem is deciding where to go and what to do.

Depending on the season and your inclination, you can ski in the mountains, fish in fresh or saltwater, rent a houseboat and cruise, try white water rafting, take a wilderness trail ride, climb a mountain or paddle a canoe.

One of the best ways to arrange a Canadian outdoors holiday is to take a package vacation. See your travel agent and find out what's available. Chances are he will be able to help you get the kind of vacation you want at a better price than you could if you tried to book everything yourself.

The variety of outdoor packages offered in Canada is wide.

One, a six-day camping trip in the Canadian Rockies, starts in Vancouver on the west coast of British Columbia, goes through the Fraser Canyon to Kamloops and Mount Robson Provincial Park to Jasper National Park in Canoe camping is a favorite activity in De La Verendrye Park in Quebec. Lakes and rivers are numerous.

Alberta, Banff, Lake Louise, Glacier National Park and back to Vancouver.

Raft-tours on inflatable boats, powered only by oars or paddles, are run in some parts of the north and are recommended for experienced outdoorsmen.

Although there's plenty of white water, the trip that crosses Nahanni National Park in the Northwest Territories is primarily a tour for people interested in wilderness, wildlife and beautiful landscapes.
