

Kathy Seifert found out that not all volunteers at Monroe Community Hospital are visitors from the outside. Here is Kathy with Gertrude Webb, a resident who heads the MCH Neighborhood Association.

Donnalee Yaw is having her temperature taken before giving blood at the Red Cross mobile unit in the St. Agnes gymnasium.

while Joan DiSteffano, having been through the procedure, is making sure the flow has stopped.

Hospital and nursing home volunteers include Barb Attridge, Susan Geedy, Monika Peterson, Karen Geedy and Vincenette Smith.

Photos by Susan McKinney

Young and Willin

It began during Lent, at the time of Operation Rice Bowl. Human Development Week brought specialists to the school to talk about world hunger and social justice, the hardships that many old people endure, the workings of the criminal justice system.

A human development committee grew up. Rice Bowl was launched among the students, and in numbers they went out to places where they could do things for people.

Most of them found plenty of work in their own parishes, or at hospitals, nursing homes and residences for the elderly.

Some went to the Al Sigi Center, the Handicapped Adult Recreation Center or the Red Cross, or worked in drives for the Muscular Dystrophy Association or the American Cancer Society. Some are teaching swimming.

Laurie Hall uses her guitar as a means of contributing to liturgies held at RIT.

Members of the St. Agnes Human Development Committee are Beth Dzuba, Jean Wright, Susan Connor, Diane Johnson and Louise Mabe.

Volunteers in Lamy, Linda P. and Lisa Mentzer.