

Mrs. Frances Paris, a resident of St. John's Nursing home, is taken to Mass by Karla Smith, Vincenette Smith and Rita Callens, left to right.

Kimberly Hutter, left, and Marca Grattet are volunteers at the Al Sigi center.

through the process, is stopped.

Willing... to Help

Rice to the e, the of the Bowl went own es for Adult ed for cancer

Right after the "week," Eileen Gaffke landed a Summer job, unpaid, at the Hall of Justice. Alicia DelCerro was accepted as a helper at the Strong Memorial Burn Unit. Stretching the "people-helping-people" concept, Suzanne Raymond became a volunteer assistant zoo keeper.

A student organization called CAP (Caring about People) arranged participation in the State Hospital Carnival and in Red Cross Blood Bank activities. The human development committee entertained 32 residents of Mariner House last month.

The girls who offer their time to parish committees wind up taking care of little children while the parents are at Mass; teaching religion; singing in folk groups; helping with Girl Scouts; pitching in at festivals.

The photos here show only a few of the St. Agnes girls caught in the surge of "volunteer" enthusiasm this past semester.

Eileen Gaffke checks in at the Hall of Justice, where she found a volunteer job.

Volunteers in parish work include, left to right, Elva Lanyi, Linda Pugliese, Cathy Mullen, Mary Ellen Stich, Lisa Montano, Patti Radell, Margaret Nothnagle and Mary Jo Noce.

CAP officers are, left to right, Liz Maccio, secretary-treasurer; Maryann Curtin, vice president, and Susan Claus, president. The Bloodmobile at St. Agnes was one of their projects.