Seminary Names Bishops To Head Alumni Drive

With the imminent opening of St. Bernard's Seminary fall semester, a number of news items last week came to the attention of the press. Chief among them was the announcement that Bishop James E. Kearney and Auxiliary Bishop John McCafferty have been named. honorary chairman and chairman, respectively, of the school's second developing Spiritual Formation, annual Alumni Civing Program.

In a letter to alumni, both clerical and lay, Bishop McCafferty commented We are asking for your financial support with attention focused on maintaining and items are merely artificial sub-stitutes for the real thing.

If you don't believe it, take a look at a few dining rooms. The wall to wall acritan is a chemical invention designed to make us forget the pleasure of thick, lush grass underfoot: Hanging plants, floral centerpieces? An attempt to bring the outdoors in The walls? Covered with a paper patterned to simulate flowers, greenery, a trellis or even a mural depicting the hunt, an arbor or woodland bower.

The stereo? Can't compete with a chorus of crickets or peepers from the pond. The soft, flickering glow of a candle? Almost as lovely as Mosquitos, ants and other crawly things do exist, as Fairlie charges, with July and August being the two worst months at least in this part of the country. And yes, that's when post of us answer the urge to cart the food outside anyway

But there are better times to picnic at least in the view of this al fresco freak.

One is in the midst of winter when the fern covered forest floor is hidden with snow. A couple of stumps Brushed off as table and chair with thermos of hot cocoa to warm one's insides and accompany crusts of homemade bread and hard cheese can be pure ambrosia: Early spring is another fine time to pack up the basket and munchaway to the tune of a March brook just broken free from February's ice sound his territorial call.

But my very favorite picnic season is fall. Early frosts have already dealt with the insect world. The sky is startlingly blue, the grass husband who is no Englishman still-thick, th eleaves in flame and periodically decries my rustic bent, the air so crisp that sweaters and sweatshirts are a must.

A cast iron frying pan for the homefries, an old enameled tin coffeepot, the aroma of its contents by fine porcelain starched linen -coffeepot, the aroma of its contents tablecloths and bell-toned crystal mingling with the small of the fire, a deserted park — these are but some of the ingredients of a dining experience so exquisite as to almost defy description. And a moment. that the poor underprivileged English writer obviously has yet to

One Henry Fairlie not only had the nerve to take issue with such and strawberry cheese cake as fit food for his queen when she visited the U.S. but leveled his guns at such national institutions as the sandwich, the snack, and indirectly, the cafeteria

But he saved his loudest petard for two of America's most beloved customs—the cookout and the eatout, in which we leave our streened kitchens to go into the yard and patio "where myriads of insects of all sizes gather and dive to the attack with the malign determination of kamikaze pilots."

As one who almost always is—to the confines of four walls and usual amenities I felt it my duty to defend the popular American

Revitalization of the Parish," a series of workshops to help the participants in their understanding of Pastoral Theology and to develop their practical skills for the the Maria Stein Retreat Renewal Center in Ohio. They are aimed at strengthening parish life through presentations by guest lecturers and discussion afterwards.

All age groups are represented at the six day program which shows how some parishioners have succeeded in revitalizing parish life to other interested parishioners throughout the county.

Angelo and Margaret Turiano members of Assumption parish attended the most recent workshop. They said the workshops stressed the need for parishioners to unite in small closely knit groups dedicated to their parish.

The Revitalization of the Parish Workshop concentrates on four themes: Focus Life, Basic Ecclesiastical Communities, Church in the Neighborhood and Christ Renews His Parish.

Bishop Albert H. Ottenweller, Auxiliary Bishop of the Diocese of the Neighborhood, mentioned to the Turiano's that he would be willing to speak to the Rochester clergy about the implementation of a similar program here.
