

Self-Help Project

St. Augustine students spent their spare time this week rounding up merchandise for a "giant" garage sale. Left to right are Anthony DiGuardi, Ellen Quatro, Kenrick Payton, Evyonne Garrett and John Wheatley. The sale, to raise money for the school, opens tomorrow afternoon and runs through Saturday, at 411 Chili Ave.

Hopscotching The Sports Beat
And noting that National Football League attendance was down, down, down after two weeks of action. Of 28 games played, a total of 20 were eligible for home TV blackouts because they were not sold out far enough in advance. League turnstile leader Buffalo already is off more than 20,000 after only two home dates.

Actually, that blackout legislation has expired but the NFL continues to observe same to sell more tickets in advance. Florida Congressman Lou Frey recently charged that the campaign against the bill to make the anti-blackout law permanent is succeeding. Quoting Frey: "The NFL has done a real tricky end run to gut the bill. Either we're running this Congress or Pete Rozelle is."

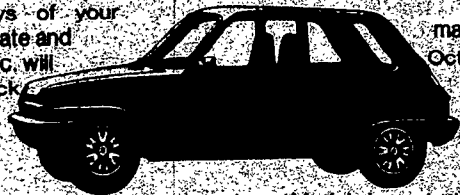

Odds Without Ends: Early returns on the Delaware football betting deal indicate a colossal flop. Only $62,000 worth of action the entire first week, of which only $28,000 was returned to the bettors as winnings. This has to be the biggest turkey in the history of legal gambling. National Hockey League gets back into prime time television starting the first Monday in January, but it's not national exposure. The games will be televised by a network that will put them into only 40 or 45 major markets, all of them cities that have NHL franchises, and thus also have guaranteed interest. Ratings in non-hockey cities doomed earlier telecasts.

Quote and Unquote: Victory by Team Canada in the first six-nation Canada Cup hockey series produced this quote from Don Cherry, of the four-man TC coaching staff: "I've been in pro hockey for 20 years and this is the first time I couldn't find a single player who's dogged it." Says something for the sport. Indiana football coach Lee Corso was quoted as saying his team needed execution. A Bloomington lawyer wrote the newspapers' letters-to-the-editor department: "Coach Corso says he needs execution. I think that's too drastic. I suggest life imprisonment."
