Summer was a busy time for Notre Dame students Peggy Reedy, Molly Fennell, Diane Myers, and Dennis Brady. In pursuit of their special interests they participated in programs which gave them opportunity for travel and educational development.

Students Experience World at Large

By MARTIN TOOMBS

Elmira — Four Notre Dame students who visited such diverse places as Canton, Iowa City, Washington, D.C. and Havixbeck, Germany during the summer returned with a similar reaction: Americans don't know as much as they should about other countries, or concentrate enough on foreign languages. They also all agreed that the best part of their experience was the opportunity to meet so many new people.

Peggy Reedy, a senior, spent six weeks in a program for high school students at Iowa State University in Iowa City, Iowa. Molly Fennell, a senior, attended the Blair Summer School of Journalism in New Jersey. Diane Myers, a junior scheduled to graduate this year, spent five weeks touring Europe, including home stays in three countries. Dennis Brady, a senior, participated in a program sponsored by the Rotary at St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y., which dealt with current world problems.

Peggy Reedy's experience involved observation in one of the first and possibly the largest speech pathology clinics in the country, she said. Peggy was assigned to work as a research assistant with Dr. Julia Davis at the clinic during a summer residency program, when children with speech problems attend therapy sessions at the clinic for seven weeks. She said that a wide range of problems were worked with, including cleft palate and hearing defects. She conducted a half-hour therapy session herself at the end of the program, with a child she had become friendly with.

Guest lecturers at the program included Dr. James VanAllan, the discoverer of the radiation belts around the earth that bear his name. Peggy earned six college credits for her work, which included a paper at the completion of the course.

Molly Fennell, RapAround coordinator this year, prepared for the job by attending the five-week school of journalism at the Blair Academy, Blairstown, N.J., on a scholarship from the Elmira Star-Gazette. The course involved two days in New York City and three in Washington, D.C., and "a lotta work," according to Molly, but she also emphasized that "I loved it."

She served as the photography editor of one of the school's newspapers, did an in-depth article on alcoholism, and a research paper on the Panama Canal.

Diane Myers' group of high school ambassadors left for Amsterdam July 1 after an orientation session in Washington, D.C. While in Amsterdam her group celebrated the Fourth of July in a "disco," and went swimming in the North Sea, Diane said. From there she journeyed to Havixbeck in northern Germany, where she lived for five days with a German family. Another home stay in Mettmeh, near Salzburg, Austria, preceded a trip through Hungary, Yugoslavia, and then to Venice, Florence and Rome, where "we missed the Pope by a half hour," Diane reported. She noted that during a cable car trip in the Austrian Alps it snowed — in July.

A final home stay in Greece was the best, Diane said. The Greeks have a siesta from 2 to 6 p.m. each day, with dinner at 8 p.m., and the evening starts at 10 p.m., she noted. Discos were the order for her group, and she added that they had American themes, especially Californian, and the music was primarily American.

Asked if the trip changed her opinion of Europe, Diane said that it hadn't, but instead had changed her opinion of the United States. She said that the experience made her see "how spoiled we are here." She explained that Europeans have less money than Americans, and seemed happier.

Dennis Brady's week-long seminar on world problems at St. Lawrence focused on the problem of world hunger, and he came to the conclusion that current world food distribution is "not right," and that efforts should be made to distribute the world's wealth and food more equitably.

The program involved 45 students, Dennis said, about half Canadian and half American. He said he had "learned a lot from Canadian kids," and noted that they were well informed about American politics, while he knew little about Canadian politics. He observed that "we should know more about Canada," and that more emphasis should be placed on other countries in American schools.

Adult Ed At Nazareth

Nazareth Academy's Continuing Education for Adults will begin its fall series in October. Classes will be 7:30-9:30 p.m. on eight successive Tuesdays: Oct. 12, 19, 26; Nov. 2, 9, 16, 23, 30. Registration by mail will be accepted through Oct. 6 and in person Tuesday, Oct. 12, 6:45-7:30 p.m. The fee is $20 per course.

Nine courses are being offered this fall. Mrs. Rose Strickland will teach "Introduction to Drawing," Sister Margaret Brennan and Ms. Mary Ann Satter will team-teach "The Art and Craft of the Film," Sister Ann Xavier will offer "The Metric System," an introduction to metric measurement which will be used throughout the United States by 1980. Two religious studies courses include Ms. Barbara Skornia's "Parents' Role as Religious Educators of Their Children," emphasizing helps for the teaching of religion in the family setting and Sister Kathleen Weider's "Our Place in the Contemporary Church."

Sister Marie Lawrence will teach "Basic Sewing or Clothing Construction" designed for both beginners and those who wish to improve on the basics. "Typing Level 1" for beginners will be taught by Sister Helen Weber and "Typing Level 2," designed to help students build speed and accuracy skills and learn how to type tabulated material, rough drafts and various letter styles, will be offered by Sister Dolores Anne. Instruction in "Beginning Guitar" will be given by Mr. Michael Corrigan.

Program brochures, registration blanks and additional information may be obtained by calling Nazareth Academy, 458-2350.
