What would you do about amnesty for those who refused to serve in the military during the Vietnam war?

BISHOP KEARNEY

Kathy LoPresti, senior "I would give them all amnesty for not serving in the Vietnam war. The draft wasn't right. They should have had a choice of whether to go into the war or not. Maybe some of those who left the country will return if there is a blanket amnesty but there are those who won't."

Rosemary Villarrubia, senior, STP "I'd excuse them all. If they didn't want to go into the war and if that's the way they really felt that's what they should have been allowed to do. All of them won't come back if a full amnesty is given, but if they want to come home they should be able to."

Nadia Garber, freshman, drama club

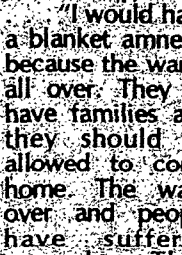

"I think they should have a partial amnesty. They shouldn't have to come home and serve severe sentences. Everyone is afraid of war and death it's a natural instinct. I'd give them a penalty like taking away their right to vote for maybe two elections. If they didn't want to serve their country they shouldn't have the privilege of voting for a while."

Wilfred Lennox, sophomore, Student Council

"There is more than 50 per cent of the men back in the country now and the government doesn't really know who's here and who isn't. I'd let them come back without serving sentences. It's all over now. There are some things the U.S. shouldn't get into, I feel it's better without the draft. A person should have the choice of whether to serve in the military. More men are going in now and are staying longer because it is a voluntary army."

Joan Hasby, freshman, chess club

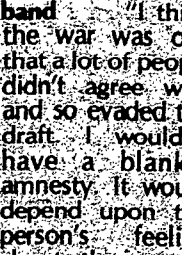

"I would have a blanket amnesty because the war is all over. They all have families and they should be allowed to come home. The war's over and people have suffered enough. They should be able to come home."

Amy Streiff, sophomore, hockey cheerleader

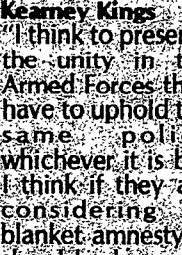

"I think they should pardon them, not give them amnesty. It's better with a voluntary military service instead of the draft because if a person really wants to serve his country he'll do a better job."

Jeff Kime, sophomore, Kearney band

"I think the war was one that a lot of people didn't agree with and so evaded the draft. I wouldn't have a blanket amnesty. It would depend upon the person's feeling about the war. I would give those people who just evaded the draft a heavier sentence than those who didn't serve because they were against the war."

Mark Lowenguth, sophomore, Kearney Kings

"I think to preserve the unity in the Armed Forces they have to uphold the same policy whichever it is but I think if they are considering a blanket amnesty it should be extended to all those from the other wars who refused to serve. I think a voluntary military is good in time of peace but in time of war I think there should be a draft."

Watch for Kathy Termotto

By JOHN DOSER

Kathy Termotto, a 17-year-old senior at Mercy High, recently won the Harley-Allendale-Columbia Invitational tennis singles tournament.

The victory was her second straight in that particular competition because she was defending champion.

She's not at all carried away with the win, however, because she says she knows her best competition wasn't in it.

One of her top competitors is Debbie Treash of Fairport to whom Termotto lost in the recent Section 5 singles semifinals. She says she didn't know why Treash didn't enter the HAC matches.

Kathy is a member of a well known Rochester area tennis family; her brother John, a 14-year-old freshman at McQuaid, won the doubles finals of the local district amateur test this summer.

There are older brothers and sisters who also played their share of tennis, she says, but they are away at college.

Her dad, Joseph E. Termotto, lost in the finals of the Class A adult doubles title with Chuck Spencer at Mendon Valley Tennis Club this summer.

Kathy says she's been playing tennis since she was a little kid, and it paid off this summer when she and her brother John won the Mendon club women's and men's singles titles, respectively.

Mercy does not compete in an interscholastic tennis league; it plays an independent schedule.

"Then we have to go through preliminary matches in order to qualify for the sectionals," Kathy explains.

This season Mercy competed against seven schools; Kathy finished with one loss (6-1) while the team finished with one win (1-6).

Mercy's only team win came at the expense of Brockport High in a non-league match for the Blue Devils.

Mercy tennis coach is Mrs. Elizabeth Meng, a chemistry teacher at the Blossom Road school.

To qualify for the sectionals, Kathy had to play the first singles performer from Harley-Allendale, Michelle Battaglia, but since Kathy had already beaten Michelle twice during the regular season, she moved into the next bracket.

She went on to defeat opponents from Bishop Kearney, Greece Arcadia and Canandaigua, in 10-game pro sets.

She lost to Treash 2-6, 7-5, 6-4 in the sectional semifinals; Treash went on to win the title with 7-6, 6-4 wins over Terry Stokes of Batavia.

There are problems, Kathy explains, to playing tennis for Mercy, because it doesn't belong to a regular league.

"There's really no competition," she says.

"It makes me look great, which I'm not," she adds.

She learned a lot of her tennis game from her brothers at the Irondequoit Tennis Club; later the family joined Mendon Valley because it was more to the family's liking.

Mercy has potential as a team, she believes, but she isn't sure whether the school will ever join a league.

Kathy is taking the regular subjects, at Mercy, but plans to go into nursing after she graduates in June.

She says she hopes to choose between the University of Rochester and Roberts Wesleyan. She says she would try out for tennis at either school.

Her grades are above average and so is her tennis game. Look for her name in the future.

Parents Involved In Radio Station

Parents are invited to broadcast on St. Agnes High School's radio station WTNT. "If it pertains to the school," Station staffers say.

Station advisor is Mrs. Bette Geen with Father Walter Cushing acting as technical advisor.

WTNT's newly elected officers are: Lisa Petore, president; Barb Attridge, vice president; and programming chairperson, Jean Wright, news chairperson, Kim Haveron, technical chairperson; Colleen Glavin, announcing chairperson.

WTNT announcers, after succeeding in try-outs, include: Karen Ceedy, Mary Kaddis, Marianne Rizzo, Suzanne Werner, Cheryl Sanfilippo, Laura Hollaway, Colleen Glavin, Nancy Raustler, and Susan Tette.

Radio announcements take place at 8:20 each morning.

Educational Information

In preparation for the Dec. 4 Catholic High Schools' entrance exams, an information booth will be set up in Long Ridge Mall the week of Nov. 13-19 from 3-9 p.m.

Aquinas, Cardinal Mooney, Bishop Kearney, and Nazareth Academy representatives will be available to answer questions and discuss their individual schools.
