Good Results

Tony Savine, this year's Kearney Carnival chairman, looks on as Brother William M. Stoldt, Kearney principal, conveys his appreciation to the near 675 volunteers participating in this annual four-day event. Despite two days of inclement weather, this year's results were reported to be the highest net and gross attained since the Carnival's initiation.

Alcoholism Conference Draws 50 Church People

Churchmen who come into contact with a family in an alcoholic crisis should "think in terms of the family, not the alcoholic. The main thing is to reduce the anxiety of the family."

In such a situation, the Rev. Joseph Kellerman said, "Don't start with the dysfunctional person, but with the most responsible and sober adult."

Mr. Kellerman, nationally recognized expert on the counselling of alcoholics and their families, was in Rochester last week to address both a local Al-Anon group and to conduct a clergy conference on alcoholism sponsored by a number of agencies including The Rochester Institute of Technology, the Council of Alcoholism of the Health Association of Rochester and Monroe County and the Men's Service Center Halfway House, Inc.

Nearly 50 persons attended the all-day program, one-fifth of that number Roman Catholics.

Churchmen aggravate the alcoholic's family crisis when they allow themselves to be drawn into what Mr. Kellerman calls a "triangle" — by siding with either the alcoholic or the spouse. "In a crisis, deal only with the person who calls," he cautioned them. The job of the churchman is to "help the alcoholic into a recovery program, not solve his problems."

"You are a shepherd, not a veterinarian," he said. The role of the churchman is to "lead sheep to what they need."

New Law Urged on Sunday Sales

Albany — Calling the revision of the Sunday day of rest legislation an "issue of immediate and direct concern to millions of New Yorkers," New York State Catholic Conference spokesman Charles J. Tobin urged legislators to develop a revised law quickly which would appropriately regulate Sunday sales and protect the workers' right to an appropriate day of rest.

He testified at a hearing in New York City called by the State Assembly Committee on Commerce, Industry and Economic Development. Among those favoring new legislation restricting "business as usual" Sunday sales were representatives of small business who indicated they were unable to compete with large retail establishments.

Noting the concern of those who keep another religious day Tobin said "the law must provide for full protection for those in our society to observe a day other than Sunday." The law recently struck down by judicial action did allow for this Sabbath option for those who celebrate some other day than Sunday as their day of Religious observance. "This can easily be accommodated in a new law as it was very successfully in the old," Tobin said.

Among points made in support for a new revised statute for the Legislature to consider are:

Assure the American worker and family that there would be one day for rest and recreation as well as for religious observance.

Provide for sales essential to health and well being but not merely for convenience.

ENTERTAIN YOUR FAMILY FOR 12¢ A DAY.

That's all the average family pays each day for the electricity that powers their television, radio and stereo record player. It's a lot of entertainment for less than what a pack of chewing gum costs these days.

Here's another fact to consider. The total cost of gas and electricity for everything from home heating to running all of your appliances is only about $2.00 per day for the average family.

When you think about it, gas and electricity are still two of the best bargains you can buy.
