

Bishop Hogan to Visit Missions

Bishop Joseph L. Hogan will lead a contingent of diocesan officials on a special visitation tour to missions supported by this diocese in Selma, Ala. and Latin America during the month of April.

"At a time when Catholic missionaries throughout the world are being subjected to the most oppressive measures, the bishop found it imperative to show diocesan support and community directly with our own missionaries and indirectly with those everywhere," said Father Joseph Reinhart, diocesan director of the missions who will accompany the bishop.

Anthony J. Costello, Courier-Journal general manager, will provide first-hand coverage of the tour sending back on-the-spot reports and photos from the various places visited.

The group will leave Easter Monday, April 11, with the first stop in Selma, Ala., where diocesan Sisters of St. Joseph work with the parish and school at Our Lady Queen of Peace. They also are active in the rural ministry there and with the missions office of the Edmundite Fathers.

Other highlight stops of the mission tour:

La Paz, Bolivia, the parish of San Jose Obrero which was established by priests from this diocese and which is now run by a team of local parishioners with support from here;

Santiago, Chile, where Sisters of Mercy from this diocese work at the parish of San Luis de Canchali;

Uberlandia, Brazil, where Sisters of St. Joseph from this diocese are on mission duty;

Jatai, Brazil, also the site of mission work by Rochester Sisters of St. Joseph.

The bishop also plans to visit other priests and sisters from this diocese working in the missions for other orders.

The Courier-Journal will run a series of reports in words and photos by Costello on each of the missions as well as on-the-spot stories on other Church-related work in the areas visited.

Father Edward Golden, pastor of St. Francis Xavier in Rochester, and one of the "Padres de Rochester" who set up the La Paz parish; Father Louis Hohman, pastor of St. Vincent de Paul in Churchville and episcopal adviser to the Courier-Journal, and Father Michael Conboy, secretary to Bishop Hogan, also will make the visitation tour.
