Students spend approximately 1200 hours each year in school. This is a great deal of time spent under the direction of those other parents. Who are the people that direct student interests, ideas, energies, and dreams? RapAround will bring to its readers, on occasion, profiles about these individuals; who they are; their dedicated commitments; and their guiding influence which prepares the young adults to take their place in society.

More Than Words from Room A221

BY JOAN M. SMITH

Sister Evelyn Marie Carlin has taught high school throughout the eastern States and in Puerto Rico. Six years ago she came to Bishop Kearney as a play director. The position was being manned so Sister, having a major in Speech as well as Drama, took over the reins of the Forensic Club. It was a move which has resulted in success and fulfillment not only for her, but the students and the school.

Room A221 is now her habitat, where from as early as 7:15 in the morning to 5 in the afternoon she teaches Theology, English and coaches the speech team.

Her teaching duties this year have been just what she enjoys most, British Literature; her favorite playwrights being George Bernard Shaw and William Shakespeare. Her enthusiastic interest in plays is not only transmitted to her students through class but also through the on-the-spot theater exposure they receive during the annual trip to Stratford, Ontario. This year, Sister will embark on May 20 with 80 students to visit the theater and see the Bard's "All's Well that Ends Well". She is no stranger to traveling with large groups since she has handled student excursions numbering 120 with efficient aplomb and even managing to enjoy the productions.

Her trips with the Forensic team aren't quite as hectic since the group usually numbers six or seven of the "readiest" speakers. Winning contests is always a good feeling but so is the making of new acquaintances. "The students and I have made so many friends," smiled sister.

In traveling with her proteges, Sister described herself as "sometimes acting like a mother and finishing the pancakes they can't eat," or "yelling at them to be sure to be in at midnight."

It is difficult to imagine Sister yelling. She is a soft spoken person who has a rapport with the young adults based on friendship and respect. While they chatted back and forth they delighted in teasing each other. When Sister commented that she doesn't become as nervous as the contest participants, Peggy Schnurr countered, "That's what you think, Sister!" And when Peggy commented on the many new friends made at the other high schools, Sister mischievously observed, "Like your friends at Aquinas."

Later this month Sister will travel to Milwaukee with sophomore Jeanne Adams who will be representing BK in the National Forensic Finals. She has her speech prepared and Sister is right behind her commanding classes as audiences for her to practice on. This dedication the students agreed, is what encourages them on to big and better accomplishments. "She has more confidence in us than we do in ourselves," they observed.

Sister is also energetic in obtaining new members for the club. She and a veteran member visit the freshman class every September explaining the club, its benefits, the friendships, and fun. As she pointed out, "If all the BK students realized how much fun we have they would all want to join."

Is Forensics losing its popularity in the schools? According to Sister it seemed to be a few years ago. Various schools teams disbanded because of the lack in interest and moderators. Besides BK and Aquinas there are three area high schools with teams; Eastridge, R. L. Thomas, and Schroeder. This situation doesn't daunt Sister. She has been trying to convince a fellow teacher over at Cardinal Mooney how great it is having a Forensic team.

Sister Evelyn Marie takes time from her busy schedule to chat with RapAround about her activities as moderator for the Forensic Club. Then, it was on to explaining the various dramatic aspects of British Literature to her class.

And as far as the BK speakers are concerned it is great. When asked about what they have gained in belonging to the group they weren't at a loss for words.

Sophomore Maurice Verrillo explained, "It has helped me to continue to develop my uniqueness as a person," and went on to say that is an experience in being able to express your views.

In Jeanne's case it developed her self-confidence and she declared, "The best thing is the pressure of competition which helps you deal with other pressures."

It helped Peggy overcome her shyness. "I'm learning a lot about myself," she commented.

An incident that made Sister proud to be associated with the young adults was the recent contest at Eastridge where Aquinas won the Sweepstakes Trophy and the BK team stood and cheered them. Aquinas returned the compliment when BK took the Liverpool Sweepstakes.

In the time she has spent at Kearney, Sister has forged a championship Forensic team. Would she be able to continue contributing her expertise to the school or did her Order require a change in assignments after a certain period of time? "No," she answered. "A person can stay as long as one year or ten and there are a few who have remained a lifetime in a certain spot."

If the BK'ers have their way they readily declared, "We intend to keep her here for awhile."
