A sign at the convent in Sao Simao reads: "He simply could have folded his arms."

Sao Simao

A hug from Sister Katherine.

Street scenes in Vila Bella, a new development where one-story, brick homes were built for poor families being displaced by the building of a dam. Families must live in the homes for three years, after which they are given the title of ownership. Sister Ann, Katherine and Mary Ann are visiting with the local people.

There is no inside water in Vila Bella and families use communal spigots. Sister Katherine chats at the "well."
