Dona Maria da Souza makes her living by taking in laundry. She has to descend a steep cliff to her "laundromat" on the banks of the Rio Claro. She explains the operation to Bishop Hogan and his group. Meanwhile . . . competition downstream.

The locals treat Bishop Hogan to a diving demonstration at their swimming hole. They use a bridge for platform.

And speaking of bridges, Gerald got Bishop Hogan, Father Reinhart and Father Conboy to cross this suspended rope variety. It is shakey enough but Gerald added a thrill by rocking the suspended structure for the visitors while they were on it.

Sister Christel runs two clinics, the one above at Itaguacu and the one below at Sao Simao, which is a parish operation.

A special hand-made gift was presented to Anthony J. Costello by an Itaguacu woman.
