Junior Achievers Recognized

BY JOAN M. SMITH

On Wednesday night May 11, 1200 people, including high school students, parents, school officials and business leaders, gathered at the Dome Arena for the Junior Achievement Future Unlimited Banquet. It was a time for not only recognizing the Junior Achievers but also the of the dedication businessmen who courage and counsel the young business entrepreneurs.

The Junior Achievement organization is made up of 1300 students, from 41 Monroe County high schools who comprise the 50 JA companies. In operating their businesses, the students raise capital to finance their individual companies; develop, manufacture and sell produčts; pay salaries and taxes; and at the end of the business year prepare income and profit and loss statements. Their hard work and business expertise culminate with the awards presented at the banquet.

The Vice President, of Sales Award went to McQuaid junior J. Michael Brown, vice president of the Nova Company, counseled by Gleason Works.

Mercy junior Susan Vergo received the Secretary of the Year Award. Sue is a member of the Ebony Company which is counseled by the R. T. French Co. Her classmate, Marie Connelly was named Vice president of Personnel. She is also a member of Ebony.

Scholarships recognizing academic achievements as well as interested activity in other endeavors went to Dareen Post, a senior at Bishop Kearney, who will attend General Motors Institute for engineering. He is a member of the BK track Fellow | classmate | Jim Sable also received a scholarship. Jim has been active in BK's Seniors Touching People community service program and will attend St. John Fisher College.

A Xerox Management Associate | Scholarship was presented to Suzanne Hahn of Our Lady of Mercy High School Sue who served as an announcer during the award presentations has been named May Queen for Mercy and will preside over the school's May Day festivities on May 20.

Marie, Susan, Mike, and Darryl Duge, of BK, were recipients of the NAJAC Award and will be attending the National Junior Achievement Conference at the University of Indiana in August

JA Achievers have one common bond...they're all busy people. Mike who became interested in the JA through a friend, Jean Ver Hoeven, is secretary-treasurer of McQuaid's speech and debate team. He also is a member of the chess and swim teams.

"I wanted to see what business was like," claimed Marie about her two year involvement with JA. Marie is a member of Mercy's Math club.

"I've met so many people," was how Susan summed up her two years in JA. Besides her business duties, Sue is also director of Mercy's backstage crew.
