The Church 1977
Fr. Andrew Greeley

The Eastertime movie, Jesus of Nazareth, produced an extraordinarily large number of pompous and fatuous comments from religious editorial writers. But the first prize easily goes to "America" editor Joseph A. O'Hare.

Father O'Hare suggested that the movie must have caused dismay in thousands of "ethnic" households. The ethnics "were probably a little surprised when they were reminded that Jesus was not a typical Irish, Italian, or Polish lad, but uncompromisingly Jewish."

According to Father O'Hare, the ethnics, probably said to one another, "Well, I know he was Jewish, but did they have to make him that Jewish?"

"Such arrogant snob-bishness is mind-boggling even for America. How does Father O'Hare know what images the ethnics have of Jesus? How does he know what the reaction was in ethnic households? Does not his gratuitous slur on ordinary American Catholics tell us more about Father O'Hare than it does about ethnics?"

I heard only one ethnic reaction - and that from a neighborhood type with a Ph.D. "It was strange to hear Jesus talking with a British accent." Such for the problems of trying to portray the universal in concrete particularities. (Although the Zeffirelli child, and accumulation of 10 units by purchase, inheritance or gift, would permit one woman in maturity to have one child. Temporary sterilization of all girls... compulsory sterilization of all men with three or more living children; required induced abortion of all illegitimate pregnancies.

"Intensified educational campaigns (including) population dynamics in all primary and secondary schools... and family planning sex education as well... payments made directly to contracepting couples... payments for periods of non-pregnancy. A savings certificate plan for 12-month periods of non-pregnancy... responsibility prizes for each five years of childless marriage. Withdrawal of maternity benefits perhaps after X children... a tax on births after X children... limitation of governmentally provided medical treatment etc. to (certain) families. Promotion or requirement of female participation in the labor force... Direct manipulation of the family structure (by) introduction of non-family distractions... selective restructuring of the family... promotion of two types of marriages, one of them childless and easily dissolved, and the other licensed for children... and other innovations which will break with (traditions) and produce social ferment... American insistence on population control as the price for food aid... Federal Department of Population.

Life, Liberty and Law
Nancy Murphy

Beyond Family Planning was written by Bernard Berelson in 1969 and published by the Population Council. Berelson is now a member of the National Council, Guttmacher Institute, Planned Parenthood. The Berelson report, condensed:

"Everything that can be done properly to lower population growth rates should be done, now... today's family planning programs, mainly via voluntary contraception, are not enough... what is to be done beyond the present programs? Here is a list (consisting of) proposals for consideration and proposals for action. Extensions of voluntary fertility control. Institutionalization of maternal care... in some countries. Liberalization of induced abortions. Establishment of involuntary fertility control agents' by the government(s) to regulate births... sterilizing agents (added) to water supplies or staple foods. Marketable licenses to have children... for example, a certificate might be (issued) for the deciattempt seems to me to have been the most successful so far.)

Why the America vendetta against ethnics? Throbbing with enthusiasm for a Third World and for liberation theology, the America editors have had no time at all for the reawakening of interest in ethnicity among American Catholics. Father O'Hare's predecessor once dismissed ethnicity as "second rate." Pomposity seems to go with the job.

One possible explanation is that despite their sympathy for the poor in the Third World, many American Jesuits have considered their ministry to be to the upper middle and professional classes in this country. Maybe the ethnics don't have enough money. Surely the Jesuit universities have treated the ethnic reawakening as though it were a dangerous infectious disease.

It baffles me. But there is no reason to think that Father O'Hare cannot go on with such slurs. What good America-reading Catholic liberal will protest? Will the Jesuit Center for Concern express concern? Will Father Manion of the Catholic Committee on Urban Ministry protest? Will the Network nuns scream shrilly?

Just imagine how loud the outcry would have been if he had suggested that black TV viewers were surprised that Jesus was white?

The point about Jesus (and Ignatius of Loyola and all great humans) is that he was so rooted in his own heritage that from the depths of the wisdom of his own tradition he was able to transcend the limits of that tradition and speak to all traditions.

Those who have contempt for their own heritages can speak to no one but themselves.
