Deaths

Sr. Waltrude

Sister Waltrude Kozlowski, who spent 50 years of her life teaching at St. Stanislaus School, died July 11, 1977, in the Sisters of St. Joseph infirmary.

Father Daniel V. Hogan celebrated the Mass of Christian Burial July 14 in the Motherhouse chapel, with Fathers Matthew Siudara, Joseph Reinhart and Robert Doell. Also present were Msgr. William Naughton and Father Frederick Walz. Father Siudara gave the homily.

Sister Waltrude entered the Sisters of St. Joseph in 1910, from St. Casimir parish in Elmira. When she first went to St. Stanislaus, school enrollment exceeded 1,000 children, most of them from Polish immigrant families. Sister was superior at the St. Stanislaus convent and principal of the school for 12 years. She held the same positions for six years at her home parish.

Survivors are a sister, Mrs. Josephine Reagan of Elmira, and several nieces and nephews.

KEEP AWAY

Please, tell your children not to climb or play near high voltage transmission towers, utility poles, or electric lines of any kind. Tell them anyone who does is playing with death. Every electric line and cable carries potentially fatal amounts of electric current. You don't even have to touch anything to get electrocuted. If you get very close to high voltage cables, electricity can jump short distances through the air and deliver a shock. A shock that can kill. So warn your children to stay away from electric facilities. Please, do it now and help us prevent a tragedy.
