It's strange how easily people are misled by the news media. When headlines in 1963 announced "Vatican Council Downgrades Mary," the media was instantly filled with reports by modern theologians and eager educators almost tumbling over one another to interpret the Vatican's words on Mary.

Catholics were urged to put aside the rosary and to disregard (by the simple act of omission) the Marian apparitions. Many Catholic school administrators subsequently abandoned memorization as an "old fashioned" teaching tool and replaced traditional Marian prayers with meaningful dialog.

Women's rights spokesmen attacked the Church which, they said, taught only that all sin and evil come through womankind.

Rosary sales dropped. Statues disappeared from some Catholic churches. The Memorare is unknown to a generation of Catholic youth. The conversion of Russia is no longer publically sought. And Mary's natural protection of the unborn and unwanted is ignored. What ever happened to truth and obedience?

The fact is that Vatican II and the Vatican II Marian

Council went further in Marian teachings than any other council in the history of the Church. Throughout the opening sessions, throughout the working sessions, throughout the closing sessions, the name and the presence of the Blessed Mother are invoked again and again. Major addresses were made on her feast days. The single most important document of all 16 documents produced by the council was dedicated to Mary. "All (documents) are related to it and can be properly understood only in light of its teachings." Pope John XXIII dedicated the entire council to Mary and Pope Paul VI in his final homily to the assembled membership prayed for "unanimous and loving acknowledgement of the place, privileged above all others, which the Mother of God occupies in the Holy Church." His words of absolute devotion to Mary were greeted by an unprecedented standing ovation, emphasizing total assent by the council fathers.

It is my personal conclusion that no Catholic diocese, no Catholic school system, no Catholic family fully knowledgeable of Vatican II, the Marian Council and subsequent Vatican documents can be silent on abortion or any other form of human mutilation including sterilization. I believe that people are misled by headlines because people seldom take the time to read and study for themselves. I believe it verges on spiritual dishonesty to accept dissenting views before we determine exactly what the Vatican has said, even when we have to dig for it.

This series will focus on Vatican II and subsequent documents as they pertain to abortion, sterilization and euthanasia. Newspapers are not infallible.
