

Beginning the survey at the site of the mission of St. Jacques, team members dig 11-inch deep holes at 25-foot intervals along three straight parallel lines.

Archeologists Probing Area Jesuit Mission Site

This month the Rochester Museum and Science Center (RMSC) is conducting a preliminary archeological and mapping survey at the Cannagaro State Historic Site on Boughton Hill, two miles south of Victor.

The Seneca village on Boughton Hill, known in the 17th Century as Cannagaro (meaning "great town" or "in the field") was the site of the Jesuit mission of St. Jacques, established in the village in 1670-71.

According to a release from RMSC, the survey, being conducted by the center's anthropology section, under contract with the Division for Historic Preservation of the New York Parks and Recreation Commission, "will be among the first in a series of positive actions taken by New York State to document the site of Cannagaro and to acknowledge the role of the Seneca Iroquois Indian in state history.

The release states that St. Jacques mission was the last of three Jesuit missions established in the region during the late 17th Century. The first, the Mission of St. Michel, was established in the nearby village of Gandougarae in 1668 by Father Jacques Fremin. In 1670, Father Fremin was joined by Julien Garnier who was to oversee the newly created mission of La Conception in the nearby Seneca Village of Gandachioragon.

Although, the release states, Father Fremin and Father Garnier visited the village of Cannagaro in early 1670, they apparently saw no need to establish a third mission at that time. Because there were already two missions in nearby villages, each with a chapel, the Christianized Senecas from Cannagaro could travel to the Mission of St. Michel for their religious services and catechesis.

Cannagaro, however, was twice the size of the village of St. Michel; and the residents began to complain that theirs was the only Iroquois village without a resident missionary, the report states.

Father Garnier assumed responsibility for all the Seneca missions in 1670, the same year that the mission of St. Jacques was established. By 1674, St. Jacques had a resident missionary and a newly constructed chapel. Although the history of the period is somewhat sketchy, the release notes, it is known that from 1674 to 1687, the year the French militia destroyed them, the Seneca villages in the area were known by their mission names.

Public visitation of the site is limited. Written permission from the Division for Historic Preservation is required for admittance.

This free booklet tells why every father should make a will . . . even if he's young and healthy!

Sixteen pages, clearly written and colorfully illustrated, tell why you should make your will and how to go about it. Charts on page 3 show what your heirs can lose if you die without a will. Page 5 discusses why you need a lawyer's help in drawing up your will. Page 6 goes into detail about how to start and what to include. No father, young or old, should neglect his will. Maryknoll's booklet will convince you!
