THE OPEN WINDOW

Fr. Louis Hohman

Dear Father Hohman,

I remember you from many years ago at RIT and one of the things that come through to me in your column is that you seem to take no time to mourn the loss of many of our religious practices with which we grew up. As a matter of fact, I remember that at the time when the Friday abstinence was eliminated you told us how the Rev. David Edman, then the Episcopalian chaplain at RIT, said we Catholics were making a big mistake by eliminating the Friday abstinence, the same mistake that his church had made many years before. There is also the question of regular confession. The idea of going to confession regularly at least appealed to the need for people to get into regular habits, like brushing one's teeth, and assured that we would at least approach the Sacrament of Penance on a fairly regular basis. But now that has all gone by the wayside and you never hear a priest recommend weekly or monthly confession. Don't you think that the Church went too far in eliminating some of these mandatory practices which do have the good effect of getting people into good solid habits which are helpful to their spiritual lives?

There were other practices, too, which the Church (or preferably, individual pastors) wrote off, such as Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, the Rosary and Stations of the Cross. These too were habits which formed a very sound basis for our spiritual lives and it doesn't seem to me that the average Christian is emotionally or intellectually capable of establishing regular habits which will constitute a solid spiritual life.

In conclusion, I simply think that they let the pendulum swing too far and many people are going to suffer for it spiritually.

(Signed) S.L.

Dear S.L.,

There is much merit in what you say, and perhaps Dave Edman was right after all. I think maybe we did jump the gun a little in terms of thinking that people had a degree of spiritual maturity whereby they could lay the foundation for their own spiritual lives and could do things entirely on their own without the prompting of some regulation or directive. But I think on the other hand that many of these practices were either eliminated or modified to the point of near non-existence simply because it was a question of recognizing that each and every one of them was a means to a higher end. If they did not actually contribute to the building up of the Christ life in people but were merely motions to be gone through then they simply were not fulfilling the function which they were intended to fulfill. Perhaps our mistake was more along the line of not replacing them with something which would achieve the desired effect.

One instance of this is the thing of Friday abstinence. The vast majority of Catholics had no idea why they were abstaining from meat and made a point of trying to juggle the law in every possible instance so that they could get out of it. It made a mockery of the whole concept of self-denial and recognition of the love Jesus had for us in His sacrifice. So that we were not getting both points across in any meaningful way to the vast majority of people.

Personally I don't think the same thing was quite true relative to some of the devotions you mentioned, although I could never really understand the theological basis of Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament as a physical act. When it comes to the Rosary and Stations of the Cross I personally believe that they can be the solid foundation of a spiritual life, along with the Eucharist, for many people and that they simply were not taught very well and became a form of rote recitation rather than an opportunity for meditating and reflecting upon the basic mysteries of our faith.

Perhaps in the not too distant future we'll have to go back and review all of these steps that were taken and maybe retract some of the "advances" that we thought we made at the time.

BUILDINGS SURVEY

An organization named Handicapped Independence H.E.R.E. is enlisting volunteers to work on an "accessibility" survey of local public buildings. The study will lead to publication of a guidebook for handicapped and elderly people. Further information may be obtained from Gene R. McGinnis at the Monroe Developmental Center, 461-2800, ext.444

ALL IN THE FAMILY

Sarah Child

You say you've never had a better garden. The tomatoes are ripening faster than you can think of things to do with them. The zucchini are in a race with the green bell peppers to see which is more prolific. The neighbors have already begun to refuse gifts of yellow squash. Then here is a recipe just for you.

My sister Jude came up with this one shortly before the current season began to overwhelm us. It not only has the merit of using up the vegetables, but it is super easy, tastes terrific, is highly nutritional and comes topped with a thick crust of melted cheese which sort of cinches the whole thing if you are a cheese nut as this writer is.

Jude, a French student of long standing, calls the dish Ratatouille which she pronounces Rat-a-twee. You can call it anything you want to. Just try it.

RATATOUILLE

Saute in a large uncovered frying pan (I use a Dutch oven), using enough oil to cover bottom of pan the following vegetables cut in large chunks: 2 medium zucchini squash, 2 medium yellow squash, 1 eggplant, 2 medium cooking onions, 1 green pepper and 1/2 pound fresh mushrooms. After these have cooked down slightly (about 15-20 minutes on a medium heat) add 4 small tomatoes, peeled and chunked. Pour into a casserole and top with a layer of bread crumbs and your favorite hard cheese sliced. (I have used Monterey Jack, mozzarella, muenster, cheddar, brick, alone and in combination. Bake for about 20 minutes at 425 degrees or until cheese is melted. Some additional hints: Actually you can eliminate or add any vegetable you want to although I tend to think zucchini is basic. Fresh mushrooms are better, but canned will do. Olive oil is terrific for the sauteeing. You can cook up a huge batch of vegetables, refrigerate and then take out several cups of the stew and top with cheese and breadcrumbs for a particular meal. Since the kids tend to scrape off the top layer of cheese first and I'm confronted with leftovers I've taken to adding a new layer of cheese and reheating at 425.

Happy Harvesting!

Deaths

Mrs. Hohman, Priest's Mother

The Mass of Christian Burial was offered for Hildegarde Oberlies Hohman last Thursday in St. Thomas More Church. It was concelebrated by her son, Father Louis J. Hohman, and a number of her friends, including Bishop Joseph L. Hogan.

Mrs. Hohman died Aug. 22, 1977. She was the widow of Louis J. Hohman, a vice president and secretary of Star Markets, who died in 1960. The late Joseph Oberlies, who designed several church structures here early in the century, was her uncle. At the funeral, both her son and the bishop spoke of her hospitality to their contemporaries in the priesthood and especially to those who were seminarians at Becket Hall when Father Hohman was rector and spiritual director.

Survivors include another son, Robert, and two daughters, Mrs. Donald (Joan) Werner and Mrs. Thomas (Betty Jean) Jennings; 12 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

John J. Kinney

John J. Kinney, a past grand knight of K of C Council 178, died Aug. 25, 1977, at the age of 87.

The Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated Saturday at Blessed Sacrament Church

Mr. Kinney was a civil engineer, trained at the old Mechanics Institute. He worked in the State Highway Department and the City Water Bureau and was assistant city engineer at the time of his retirement in 1961. During World War I he was with Base Hospital 19 in France.

He served the K of C as chairman of several state commissions and was a district deputy in 1953. He was a past commander of American Legion Post Streb-Lappin-Klem.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Donald J. (Mary) Meyer of London, Eng., and Mrs. Walter (Katherine) Rafalko of Timonium, Md.; a son, John G. Kinney of Richardson, Texas; 19 grandchildren, four great-grandchildren, two nephews and several cousins.

Sr. Donoghue

Sister Frances Teresa Donoghue, teacher, writer and editor, died Aug. 17, 1977, at the St. Joseph Convent infirmary. She was 84 years old and had been a member of the Sisters of St. Joseph for more than 65 years.

The Mass of Christian burial was celebrated in the Motherhouse chapel Aug. 20 by Fathers Edward J. Lintz, Edward Golden, Walter Wainwright and Joseph Reinhart, and Msgr. John M. Duffy. Msgr. William J. Naughton also was present.

Sister Frances Teresa taught at Nazareth Academy for 30 years and at St. Agnes and Geneva's DeSales high schools. She taught also at the old Nazareth Normal School and in the following parishes: St. Patrick's, Seneca Falls; St. Mary's, Elmira; and St. Mary's, Waterloo. St. Augustine's, Sacred Heart and St. Ambrose, Rochester.

She wrote for secular and religious publications in both prose and verse, developing many of her essays from her teaching experiences. She edited a selection of essays entitled "The Snob and the Saint," in which she declared that every human personality contained elements of both. A former student has said that Sister Francis recognized "no poor" students, only students.

Sister is survived by several cousins.
