

How to start cars in below zero weather

The AAA offers the following tips for starting cars in below zero weather:

- Keep gas tank filled to avoid fuel-line freezing.
- Keep car in a garage if possible.
- Park the vehicle with its back to prevailing winds and its hood against a building if you don't have a garage. Place a blanket over the hood.
- Before starting car, make sure headlights, radio and other electrical accessories are off.
- To start car, turn on ignition, depress accelerator once, then let it up half way (or follow instructions in the owner's manual).
- Don't keep starter turning over for more than 10 seconds at a time.
- Never "pump" the accelerator since this will flood the engine.
- If the engine is flooded, shut off ignition, push the accelerator to the floor and hold it there one minute. This procedure allows excess gas to drain through the manifold, with enough fuel remaining to provide a proper start.
- Keep car engine tuned and the battery charged and filled.
- Keep use of accessories to a minimum during cold weather to eliminate unnecessary battery drain.
- Have battery checked frequently and serviced if necessary.

Pre-winter tune-up vital

Anti-freeze should be checked before the temperature goes into its winter plunge. The amount of protection you need depends on how cold it gets in your area. Radiator hoses also should be inspected. They are inexpensive to replace but expensive on engine repairs if they burst.

Finally, the pre-winter months are a good time to get a tune-up or you can do it yourself. That involves changing spark plugs, checking the starting motor, the starter coil, all fluids (brake, power steering) and the timing of your engine. Even a new battery won't start your car if the plugs are worn out.

So, give that automobile all the help you can this winter. Like you, a car finds it more difficult to "get up" when it's cold outside.

Don't delay periodic checkups

Year around engine coolants last as long as three years depending on the recommendations of the car manufacturer.

Certain oils are as efficient in December as they are in July and most car companies today suggest an oil change only once in 7,500 miles.

Lubrication of the under-side of the car is almost a matter of history.

Those extended intervals on oil changes and elimination of other maintenance items on the automobile are great for a person's ease of mind and also for an ease on one's purse.

But there is an element of alarm. Despite those intervals between changes that can run six months or more, your car does need a more frequent checkup.
