Atmosphere at Hugo's: A Period Elegance

By PETER FRAVER

The evening hours at Hugo's ripen to a subtle melody. Chiffon rustles and shining silver and wine glasses kiss elegantly in transit on silver trays.

There is a procession of couples from the dark through the door of Hugo's into the Art-Deco dining room, where they call to one another and linger over orchids floating in watery centerpieces.

Owner Louis Glesmann has employed Michael Rizzo, formerly of the Plaza Hotel in New York and The Sands in Las Vegas, to create dinners for two which include Veal Oscar, Lobster and Wellington, and Steak and Quail.

Baker Christopher Bower tops off these dinners with homemade desserts, the prize of which is his special hazelnut cheesecake. Together these two wizards make the menu a delight.

Hugo's goes to lengths for a price. A call ahead will ensure an intimate, specially created dinner for two. There are few singles at Hugo's, mostly there are couples talking quietly in the softly lighted dining room, or playing backgammon under the neon palms in the lounge.

Maitre d'hote Thomas Lamphear opens the door to this place of casual elegance, and Bartender Thomas Gould opens the extensive wine list and the top-shelf liquor.

Hugo's serves dinner from 5:30 to 10:30 Mondays, Fridays, and Saturdays through Saturdays. The house also has party facilities, a special party menu, and entertainment in the lounge on Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays.

The price range for dinners, exclusive of wine, is $7.50 to $25.
