Mass. Governor Raps Stevens Co.

Boston (RNS) — Massachusetts Governor Michael S. Dukakis became the sixth governor to support the boycott of the products of J.P. Stevens and Company here when he addressed demonstrators on the steps of the statehouse. He said the company, which has two textile plants in Easthampton, Mass., "has refused to be a good citizen and take seriously the National Labor Relations Act."

The company has been found guilty of more than 1,200 violations of federal labor code since 1963. Other governors who have supported the Amalgamated Textile and Clothing Workers in its 15-year drive to unionize J.P. Stevens workers are those from California, Colorado, Minnesota, Rhode Island and Wisconsin.

SOME THOUGHTS TO CONSIDER

By Ed Sulewski

As funeral directors, we rely on the reputation we have built over the years in our community — and the word of that reputation being communicated from one person to another. The services we offer are of a very personal nature — because the people we serve are under great emotional stress. Because of this, we are careful never to dictate to a family what should be done — or not done — concerning the funeral arrangements. There are many options, and a part of our service is to inform you of those options. People turn to us, with confidence, for professional counseling — because they know we will not try to make their decisions for them. We are always glad to answer any questions you may have — and welcome your call or visit.
