Sellitto's: Hospitality Family Style

By Peter Fraver

The frictions which harden many places into a rough and cynical quarreling trim are conspicuous at Sellitto's by their infrequency. The sum total in time and energy expended to perpetuate this infrequency is impressive. The people are unconsciously graceful and the cordiality of the place is strident and intimate. As one steps in the door unfamiliarity melts quickly into hospitality Sellitto's is primarily a party house. Catering mostly to family affairs such as weddings and confirmations. The capacity for parties is 150 and the banquet menu is loaded with specials like New York Sirloin, Lobster Tails, Veal Parmesan, and Spring chicken. The party facilities are available for both lunch and dinner, and the prices for menu entrees range from $4.30 to $11.00, inclusive of tax and tips.

Mother Jennie Sellitto, son Butch, Aunt Gerry, and sister Annie also whip up daily luncheon specials Wednesday through Friday which include quick, tasty sandwiches for businessmen pressed for time. Friday evenings this same group caters especially to families, with eggplant parmesan and stuffed manicotti specials, both available in children's portions. Senior Citizen Discount Cards are also honored.

On July 3 Sellitto's was 31 years old. There was not a celebration, just the quiet contentment of a family doing the business of making other families satisfied. And doing it very well.
