rker Melvin Fulwood demonstrates some of the tools loaned

Sister Carol Wulforst holds Jacob Howard while his mother, Alison Howard, provides information for the Denver screening test, at the Tioga Well-Child Clinic.

Development

Response

Beverly Stearns, director of Project Share in Schuyler County, speaks with Margaret Vahn about her participation in the program in which persons over 60 years old trade services.

ir
n
h ir
e e ιe ιe

g ιt
n
e
e s

n
l. ls

r

Diocese totaled $118,500. After 12% was set aside for administrative expenses, 75% ($78,210) of the monies remaining went to the National Campaign Office for allocation to self-help projects from across the country that requested more than $10,000. The 25% ($26,070) that remained was made available to regional CHD task forces for grants to local self-help projects meeting CHD guidelines.

This year National funding was awarded to GROUP 14621, a community organization in the 14621 zip-code area of Rochester. The Tioga County Well-Child Clinic and the Schuyler County Barter Transport System were among the 12 projects which received local funding.

The theme of this year's Campaign Appeal is: "Where there's a thirst for justice . . . Campaign for Human Development". There are many people in our country still thirsting for justice and we must continue our efforts to create a more just society. The 1978 Campaign for Human Development Appeal offers us an opportunity and a challenge. Our generous contributions to this appeal can provide a continuing response to the needs of the poor and powerless among us.

Bishop Joseph L. Hogan presents a check to Rose Marie Kushner, co-director and nurse at the Well-Child Clinic, during the annual CHD board meeting at St. Mary's, Canandaigua.

April Peck is examined by Rose Marie Kushner at the Tioga Well-Child Clinic.

Carol Lloyd, director of the Rochester area CHD, leads a discussion during a South East Regional Meeting.