Whenever a bad storm threatens power failures, RGE throws everything it has into keeping your heat and light on. And emergency crews speed to restore any lost service as quickly as possible.

That's the dramatic side of RGE's service to you. But there's a routine side, too. RGE spends $40 million annually on necessary alterations and additions to our system.

The alterations include relocating buried cables and gas lines where a road's being rebuilt.

The additions include things like new electronic switches and improvements in our back-up capabilities. (How quickly we restore lost power depends partly on how fast we can switch to back-up systems.) They also include installing additional transformers and electric lines to provide additional service where needed.

Are these outlays necessary? They are if you want continuously dependable gas and electric service.

INTERTHERM . . . a very interesting gift for that hard-to-heat room. ***

Just plug into any standard 120 Volt outlet for quick floor to ceiling warmth. Interttherm is available in 3' to 8' sizes and offers a slide bar thermostat for temperature control. The only thing better than giving an Interttherm . . . is getting one!
