

Those Most in Need

36 M is crippled and has three children not yet in their teens. The family's income is from public assistance but that only covers the most basic necessities.

37 The house the Ls live in is in such a condition, that L is going to try to winterize one room of it so he, his wife and their five children will be able to live in it this season.

38 The Rs were recently married. He is unskilled and has trouble getting work. She has Parkinson's Disease. Bills are piling up for food, medicine, and rent.

39 K and her three children recently moved into the area. The family is on public assistance and needs much more help to cover the cost of making their living quarters habitable.

40 S is alone and raising her child. She lives in a substandard apartment, and the money she is able to earn must not only be spent on the necessities, but also on the services of a babysitter for the child.

41 A is 41. Two months ago his wife died leaving him with three small children to raise alone. The family is suffering from extreme loneliness and heartbreak. He has missed a great deal of work because of his bouts with depression.

42 There are six members of the L family. L is ill with a heart condition and is unable to work. The family has been on public assistance for more than a year, and maintaining the home on this income is a great struggle.

43 M has cancer. His house is substandard, off in the back hills of a rural community. While he was in the hospital for treatment, someone ransacked his home.

44 W was a carpenter until he fell off a ladder and seriously injured his back. His partial disability is not enough to cover his rent and other bills. He has no family and very few friends.

45 Although S is a hard-working man the income from his job is just barely enough to cover the expenses of his family which consists of his wife and three children. There is no money left over at the end of the month to put aside for holiday festivities.

46 B and her four children recently moved here, looking for a better place to live. The family is staying with relatives, whose house isn't large enough for all of them to live comfortably. Mrs. B is trying to get on public assistance.

47 For nearly 20 years Mrs. E has raised her two grandchildren. Now that they have left her care, she is experiencing a great deal of pain, emotionally, psychologically and financially. The holiday season is going to be especially difficult for her.

48 Mrs. C gave birth a few months ago. Shortly afterwards her husband was injured in an automobile accident. With the new addition to the family and C's hospital bills to pay, there are no funds left over to celebrate the holidays with.

49 T and her six children were deserted a few weeks ago. She is confused and desperate, and is barely able to cope with the stress of her concern for the welfare of her children.

50 B is homebound with a serious arthritic condition. Desiring independence over institutionalization, she has chosen to remain at home with her lone companion, a dog. She is on a fixed income and can hardly meet the bills.

51 W is in his 80s, living alone in a small house. His income is such that he can just pay his bills. Occasionally he is able to leave his home for a few hours of socializing with other seniors, but that is the extent of his contact with the world outside his home.

52 The Ns are in their 90s. He is blind; she is ailing with diabetes and a heart condition. They are living in a house which is in great need of repair.

53 R is nearly 90, alone, homebound with his dog. He is living in substandard housing. His only contacts with the outside world are through a social agency. He is living on a fixed income.

54 Although M raised seven children, now that she is in her 80s, none of the children help her with her day-to-day difficulties. She is deeply hurt by this. When others show any kindness, she is thrilled for days.

55 N is a young mother with two pre-school children. She has been trying to better herself through a school program but the cost of it is severely taxing her budget, and there is little money available for holiday expenses.

56 The Bs are struggling to provide for their family of four. They have managed to get off public assistance, but their small income is barely enough to cover the necessities of life — a financial picture which is very discouraging.

57 The holidays are a time of dread for M, the young mother of three. She was rejected by her own family, and while she desperately wants her children to know the happiness of Christmas, she cannot afford to give them what she herself was denied.

58 G is a mother of three who has valiantly managed to keep her family together during an extremely difficult year of emotional and financial stresses. She says it is her faith in God which sustains her. She is in need of help to face the holiday season.

59 The Cs with their six children will have a very lean Christmas. Two of the children were recently hospitalized. Although both the Cs work, their joint income is so meagre that fuel bills from last winter are still being paid. The holidays, rather than a time for enjoyment, are anticipated with more frustration.

60 The Ds and their three children have gone through a year full of crises. D's health is so poor he lost his job, and then had to undergo open-heart surgery. Mrs. D has a part time job now, and the family is on public assistance; but the family is so indebted that the holidays will be very difficult.

THOUGHTS TO CONSIDER

"Your Family's Security"

By Ed Sulewski

Planning for your family's future security is one of the satisfactions of being a father and husband. Your guard them well - with insurance against the possibility of fire, accident or illness . . . savings to provide the income for educations . . . insurance to pay off your home loan. All these precautions - in the event that you should die and leave them with all the decisions and responsibilities that you willingly shoulder for them now.

But, should you die unexpectedly, the first - and most difficult - task they would face would be funeral arrangements.

We suggest that you take care of this for them too - recording with us your own personal preferences and wishes. By making many of these arrangements now, you will have provided your family with a helpful guide to follow, and many of the difficult decisions would be made for them. You can even pre-pay some of the costs of your funeral, relieving them of this financial responsibility.

We would be happy to answer any questions you may have concerning pre-arrangement. It is just one more way you can provide for the future security of those you love.
