

Brian Holzschuh at work.

Sue Ward makes pizza dough.

Holy Childhood

A Flurry

One could hardly guess from the sedate exterior of the building standing alone at a distance from the road the beehive of activity within.

The building houses the School of the Holy Childhood, a unique diocesan institution for more than 90 exceptional children and 35 exceptional adults.

The school, headed by Sister Serafine, draws students from all denominations and from all sectors of the Rochester community.

Greg Herman does math problems while Sister Pius keeps a close eye on his work.

Patricia Taggart tries on the skirt she made in teacher Peg Ryan's sewing class.

Sister Seraphine, principal at Holy Childhood watches Gina Fumia do her school work.