Do you expect rising fuel costs to affect the way you live in the coming years?

"I won't be able to afford gas. It'll also limit airplane flights. And higher heating bills will mean that our house will be colder than it is now. I think the use of buses will increase; you'll just have to use buses to get around instead of the convenience of the family car."

"I feel nuclear energy is going to take over everything. I'm not for it unless they find a way to take care of the wastes. Three Mile Island scared people but they're still issuing licenses. We are so dependent on cars they'll probably go to other mixtures of gas or maybe to electric cars and possibly solar cars, but that's a long way off."

"I'm going to go to college in Florida and with the gas shortage, I won't be able to come up here too often. You won't be able to do as much traveling. I wanted to see the United States and I won't be able to do that if the shortage gets worse. We'll also have to develop solar energy for home heating."

DEBBIE WEIDMAN
Senior

"I think it's going to have a big effect on my life because by the time I get out on my own I won't be able to afford anything. There's going to be more public transportation; they're going to have to come up with something else, another fuel. Probably solar energy will be important. I think Three Mile Island put a big scare in everyone. Nuclear energy might come back in about 60 years."

JOE GIZZI
Junior baseball

"It means I'm going to get the car less. We'll be conserving and the family will have to make sacrifices. As a beginning driver it will make it more difficult to get gas for the car. As for the future, I'll have to consider car pooling and buses and things of that sort. I'll have to economize, like having a small car to save gas."

DAN CORSI
Junior basketball

"I think it will affect me immensely in the years to come because I know I'll have to make more money to pay the increased costs. If a job is far away I won't be able to take it. It will affect what kind of car I get, what kind of job I have, and how I like my life. It'll complicate my life much more."

SANDY LISI
Senior
Spanish Club

"I think it will affect my life. I feel that with the gas shortage there is going to be an increase of other transportation to jobs. We'll have to be using ourselves, such as bicycling or walking, which could improve our health. There are going to be a lot of kids in the future who will need buses. They'll have to get to school for their education. We will have to use solar energy especially for home heating."

SCOTT STACHOWSKI
Senior
National Honor Society

"I'd have to say that rising costs will make everyone become more energy conscious. They'll turn toward saving energy any way they can. The government should create some sort of benefit to help people insulate their homes. Big cars will become obsolete; mopeds and Honda Civics will be the wave of the future. I think people, after they look at it, will tend to go to solar heating. In the future, it will be commonplace to have a solar heater. People won't have any choice whether or not to conserve."

Scholastic Donors

Students and teachers at McQuaid Jesuit High School donated 137 pints of blood last week when the Rochester Red Cross Bloodmobile visited. Of the total number of participants there were 91 first donors. Above, registered nurse Mrs. J. Wilder takes a blood sample from the earlobe of senior Lemuel Rogers. At right, Math teacher Jim Aha lies down for the cause.

Play Features One Woman

On May 24, St. Agnes will feature "Susan B. Anthony, a One Woman Play", performed by Ms. Lorraine Smith. This short play revolves around Miss Anthony's life as a school teacher and activist in the women's movement. Planners for the assembly maintain that the play is appropriate at this time because, this summer, Susan B. Anthony will become the first woman to appear on United States currency.

Winner

Grace Ricci, a Cardinal Mooney sophomore, was the recipient of the Winner's Circle $5 for the week of May 2.
