

DPC Beginning Year

Waterloo — The Diocesan Pastoral Council (DPC) will begin its new year with a Mass celebrated by Bishop Matthew H. Clark in St. Mary's Church Saturday, Sept. 15 at 9 a.m.

The remainder of the agenda includes time for the DPC members to become acquainted with Bishop Clark, and for those items of business left uncompleted last November when Bishop Hogan resigned.

The last agenda item is an hour of open discussion, designed to give members the opportunity to share their concerns for the Church of the Rochester diocese with Bishop Clark.

In addition to the election of new officers, the council will hear a report from the Needs Task Force, which met during the summer.

Proposals pending last November to be discussed are: a proposal for a diocesan Youth Convocation, with youth representatives from throughout the diocese; a proposal calling for the diocesan directors to examine the study of the role filled by women in the diocesan Church, and develop plans to increase their involvement; and a proposal calling for a committee to study the feasibility of a diocesan school board.

A presentation also will be made to Sister Mary Ann Binsack, DPC executive secretary for its first four years, who left the post July 1.
