

OPEN WIDE THE DO

One of the greatest proofs of the maturity and growth of the Mission Church is the development of the local clergy. This is a joyous sight — another native priest being ordained to assist the local bishop in the care of his flock.

Many young men and women in the Missions are being called by Christ to serve Him as priests, Sisters or Brothers. Most of them are poor, unable to afford the low cost of tuition. They find a helping hand in the Society for the Propagation of the Faith which this year is supporting over 40,000 seminarians and 8,000 novices as they prepare to serve God and their own people.

The vitality, the service and the work of the Mission Church depend on the support you offer through The Society for the Propagation of the Faith on MISSION SUNDAY.

The first work of the Mission Church is at two catechists in Ghana tell the story of God and elders of the town.

The Mission Church is at work in 879 Missions in America and Oceania. Most of these dioceses the people are materially poor. The Society provides basic support for each Diocese for pastoral and social service so that the Society, these works simply.
