THOUGHTS TO CONSIDER

"As Seasons Change . . ."

We have all watched the seasons change year after year -- and yet, each time, we are able to appreciate the beauty as though we had never seen it before. Fall -- with its brilliant colors, crisp days and promise of winter, a resting period for all life. We become accustomed to the unfolding of each year -- and it becomes a part of a natural life process that we expect to continue forever. And life does continue -- in many forms. But perhaps a life that you loved best, that was very dear to you, has ended -- and you feel the emptiness that comes with that loss. You know that you are not alone; that there are many who have experienced a similar grief that they once felt was unbearable. And the time will come when you, too, can pick up the pieces and take up your own life again. Making yourself aware of nature -- its beauty and its continuance -- can be a comfort during a time of great sadness. Enjoy fall -- share its beauty with someone who may need your help or comfort. Helping someone else is one of the best ways to help yourself.
