ND 25th Upcoming

Notre Dame students and faculty are preparing for the school's 25th anniversary celebration Feb. 10. Each homeroom at the school addressed invitations to the members of one graduating class. They found the names weren't wholly unknown. Above, from left, Tom Oback, Cathy Cowlick and Mary Beth Gamer address the invitations while Sister Marie Catherine, the homeroom teacher, and Ann Bernice Kalec oversee. Mary Beth made out the invitation for her parents, Susan and Robert Gamer, members of the class of '57. Ann Bernice made out the one for her aunt, Dolores Sandore, from the class of '56. And Tom Oback had any difficulty with the names, the students needed only ask Sister Marie Catherine, class of '56 herself.

Inside Look At Africa

Nazareth Academy students in Sister Joan McDowell's Asian-African Cultures classes had an opportunity to learn about African culture from Father Duah-Agyeman, a CYO Outreach Worker from Ghana, West Africa. He answered their questions about African culture, history and ethics and noted that Ghana's idea of the American lifestyle comes from American TV shows just as our idea of Africa comes from movies about that continent.

Other facts brought out in Father's discussions were that there are seven choices of names for boys and girls, depending on which day of the week they are born; children are governed by their parents while they live at home; and the people live in a matriarchal society and respect the elderly.

Winner!

Jon Skinner, a junior at McQuaid Jesuit High School, was the recipient for the Winner's Circle $5 for the week of Jan. 3.

Creating Fashions

It was a cutting, fitting and hemming time (Lisa DeMarco measures hem for Laura Scherzi) during a recent St. Agnes clothing and textile class. The students showed off their creations at a fashion show last night.

Equal Time

In view of the Soviet Union's recent exploits, should the Moscow summer Olympics be boycotted and moved to another site.

CHRIS FARAONE
Sophomore
Soph Tones

"Yes they should be moved from Moscow. It will lessen the tensions and it will show the Russians that we're as tough as they are, and it will also hurt them economically. It will show them that their aggressions are useless."

JUDY ROBERTO
Freshman

"I don't think they should be pulled out of Moscow, especially after all the training the athletes have gone through. I don't think it would help. Russia will do what she wants whether we take the Olympics out of Moscow or not."

SANDY ROMANOWSKI
Junior yearbook copy editor.

"I personally feel the Olympics should stay in Moscow. I think the U.S. has to think of our athletes and all the time and money that have gone into their training. I don't really see how changing the site would solve the conflict between the U.S. and Russia and I also feel political ideals shouldn't be placed on such a spectacular event."

KIM COSTANZA
Freshman

"I don't think it's fair to the athletes because they've worked so hard to compete and I don't think if they do pull the Olympics out of Moscow it will matter to the Russians. I don't think it will make them pull out of Afghanistan, and I don't think using the Olympics as a strategy move is going to change Russia's mind. They made their move and probably will stay in Afghanistan."

MARIA LYTER
Freshman

"I think they should have the games at Moscow because if they move them there will be a financial problem and it's not fair to the athletes to train all this time and then not be able to compete. I don't think it would have an effect on Russia's foreign policy."

ANNE ILLINGWORTH
Sophomore
Soph Tones

"I think they should be moved because it will show the Russians they can't push us around and it would relieve the tensions that would result when all the nations gathered in Moscow. Russia would lose money because there wouldn't be any tourists and it would show them that we don't have to go to war to show our strength."

ROSIE RICHARDSON
Freshman
Freshmen Chorus

"I think it would be unfair to the athletes to boycott the summer Olympics, especially after all they've done to prepare for the events. The Olympics should remain what they are — sport competitions — not a political lever."

PAULA SCISCIOLI
Sophomore
ski club

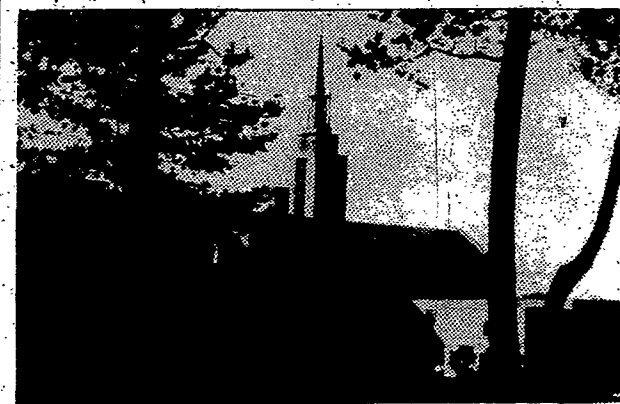

"I feel the summer Olympics should stay in Moscow. The Olympic games are a worldwide event with many countries participating and they should have a say in what happens. I personally feel the sudden changing of the site of the games would be inconvenient for the athletes. They've been preparing for the games for a long time. I don't feel the political status of the country to hold Olympics should affect the games."

Home Situations Discussed

A faculty workshop, sponsored by the Office of Family Life, was held at St. Agnes High School, Jan. 14. A team from that department addressed the faculty, as educators, focusing on their role dealing with students living through and in a divorced parent situation. Topics were: psychological ramifications of separation and divorce on adolescents; the relationship of school personnel to the single-parent family; legal "dos and don'ts" for school personnel; the Roman Catholic Church's teaching about divorce and remarriage.

Students Present Gifts

Representing St. Agnes, Mary Feller and Beth Bateman presented a check for $100 to the Cerebral Palsy campaign on the Channel 13 Telethon, Jan. 13. The school's Human Development Committee, directed by Mrs. Marie Casciani, worked with the students on various projects to raise the money.
