The Way It Was April 30, 1975

On the Spring show tour, Nazareth Academy was preparing "Fiddler on the Roof." DeSales was rehearsing for "Rainbow" while McQuaid parents were doing "Life, Liberty and Laughter."

In anticipation of the bicentennial year, the American Freedom Train was traveling the nation and the Bishop Kearney Marching Kings were preparing to greet it when it rolled into Rochester.

Vietnam was still in the news and Nazareth students were asked in Equal Time if the U.S. was to blame for the crisis. All the girls said no. Sophomore Mary Shelly stated, "I don't feel it was our fault. We couldn't go in and totally stop the war, but we helped them as much as we could." And freshman Mary McGrath said, "We're not totally to blame. The South Vietnamese are at fault too. We went over to help with men, arms and money and they tended to misuse this help."

Michael J. Watts, Notre Dame, was awarded a Merit Scholarship through the International Business Machines Corp. He was also a New York State Regents Scholarship winner and a member of the National Honor Society. He listed flying gliders as his hobby.

Aquinas pitchers John Ivanuska, Kyle Sullivan and Nick Ventrillo, struck out 13 and led the Little Irish to 11-1 victory over Harley-Allerdale. In discussing the teams to beat that year for the City-Catholic Crown, Coach Rich Piller mentioned Cardinal Mooney, Bishop Kearney, East, and McQuaid.

Dogpatch U.S.A.

St. Agnes High School will present "L'il Abner," under the direction of Sister Ann Patrice Carrigan, May 9 and 10, at 8 p.m. The cast includes students from St. Agnes, McQuaid, Aquinas, Sperry, and Edison Tech. Above are some of the dejected characters of Al Capp's comic town who are overcome by fond memories as they struggle with the breaking of ties. In first row are Mike D'Ambra, Sue Ralston, Bob Keenan, Ann Feller; second row includes Kevin Ward, Carl Teabeaut, Ann Marie Farrell, Kevin Butler, and Janice Schwind.

Equal Time

Last week the young ladies at Nazareth Academy discussed their opinions regarding whether wives should work. This week it's the gentlemen's turn to have a voice in the matter.

Should wives work outside the home?

DAVID GULIAN
Sophomore
football

"Yes they should because it's harder to financially support families now, because the cost of living has gone up. Most women work today to help support the family. It has become more of an economic necessity today rather than working for self-fulfillment. I think it's easier to raise a family with both parents working because of the financial costs that have to be met."

"I think if they want to work they should be able to, but in a lot of cases they have no choice. Due to the economic situation, if you want some extras, it's necessary for wives to work. In the case of raising a family I think when both parents work the father tends to take on more responsibility for raising the children."

TODD BATTAGLIA
football

"Yes, they should because of the cost of today's living — it's necessary especially with large families. If the children are to have all the opportunities, like a Catholic education, families need the extra money. Definitely it has become acceptable for the wife to work. The economic situation is taking away the choice of whether to stay home or work."

MIKE SCHIANO

"I think they should. With the economic situation, many families find it necessary to have two incomes. There is a question about raising children but day care centers and a shared responsibility between the parents can solve it. I think it's been a little bit of each — economics and the women's movement that's motivated wives to work. They feel self-fulfilled taking on the extra financial responsibility."

MARK LOOMIS
Freshman
golf

"I think it's a good idea for wives to work because it will help support the family. Raising a family will be difficult especially when the children begin school. Having wives work outside the home has become an accepted fact."

MIKE CERAME
boxing

"Yes, they should. Wives have to help out a little because of the economic situation and the high cost of living. It has become more of an accepted fact that wives do work — more so than say 10 to 20 years ago."

JONATHAN THOMSON
Senior
Debate team

"I think it depends on the particular family. If the wife wants to work and if the kids can get along and the husband is tolerant there's no reason why she shouldn't. But if the wife wants to stay home she should have that choice. There are always going to be families well off enough to allow the wife to stay home, and there are always going to be families who have to stretch to meet each pay check, so as I said, it depends on each family."

ED GALA
Senior
Student Council

"I don't think that it's a matter of choice if they should. The economic situation and the changing attitudes about women working make it necessary for both the financial security and women's sense of self-worth that they work. When women started taking on a more important role in careers social changes took place regarding the raising of children — day care centers evolved. I also think that when both parents work it makes for equal distribution of the responsibility of raising the children."
