McQuaid Announces New Basketball Coach

By Terrance Brennan

Dan Panaggio, former Cardinal Mooney and Brockport State star, has been named varsity basketball coach at McQuaid replacing Bob Cohen who resigned after one year at the helm.

"I wanted to get back into coaching this year," Panaggio said, "and this is a great opportunity. I've always felt this was as good a coaching job as there is in the Rochester area. There's tremendous potential here."

Panaggio, 25, will keep his job as an instructor at the Plaza Athletic Club downtown and coach only basketball at McQuaid.

As a guard on Ed Nietopski's great basketball teams in the early '70's, Panaggio teamed up with other Mooney greats, Glenn Hagan and Larry Lane. He was a two-time All-Greater Rochester guard at Mooney, then played four years of varsity ball under his father, Mauro, at Brockport.

"I think my greatest asset is that I got to learn the game under two great people — my father and Eddie," Panaggio said. "You tend to coach based on the way you played."

Panaggio served for one year as a graduate assistant coach at the University of Oklahoma, where he earned his master's degree. He then coached varsity basketball at Wayland Central for a year, finishing 15-6 and reaching the semifinals of the Section 5 Class A tournament.

The Way it Was — May 7, 1975

The Aquinas Drama Club, under the direction of Father Cullen, was preparing their presentation of "Little Mary Sunshine."

DeSales students gave their opinion in Equal Time regarding their future employment — "Was it more important to have a college degree or to immediately enter the job market?"

Senior Beth Thomas summed up what her two classmates David Hanley and Tim Tapscott thought about going immediately into employment. She said, "I don't think you should feel you have to go to college. I don't feel you should be made to think that there aren't jobs available to you without a college degree." Classmate Felix St. John along with four other students disagreed.

"I think," he said, "going onto college is more beneficial. College gives you a wide background so you can go into many jobs."

Tennis was in full swing over at Bishop Kearney with the team, under coach Gary Heim, winning a match against the McQuaid Knights, 4-1. That win, coupled with the one over Benjamin Franklin, 5-0, gave the Kings the City-Catholic crown.

"The McQuaid win was a big one for us," Heim said. "I think now we have the best chance to win the championship."

Team members included Bill Nealon, John Matthews, Steve Psaila, Matt Bezek and Frank Grayson.

Over at Nazareth students were preparing for World Hunger Week, while Mercians were planning their May Day, and St. Agnes students were anticipating a '50s Day Dance.

The CYO presented a new program for youth groups — Awakening. The project was a one-day program designed for groups preparing for Confirmation. Directed by CYO staff members it consisted of structured experiences, discussions and liturgy.
