What do you think of the present use of children as adult models?

NAZARETH

CHARLECIA GUILLES
Freshman
homeroom rep

"I feel girls, especially 11-year-olds, shouldn't be in adult clothing or makeup. They're maturing too fast. Maybe between 15 and 16 years of age they'd know how to be a good model. They should enjoy their childhood and not be made to grow up too fast. If they model children's clothes it's all right, but adult modeling, I think is ridiculous."

ANN KOSS
Freshman

"I feel that parents shouldn't push their children into the modeling field. You only live that age once so you should enjoy it while you're in that age. They're pushed into the adult world too soon. People want to see new and younger faces so it's been commercially picked-up on."

KELLY SCHATZLEIN
Sophomore

"I think it's great because it gives a child 11 or 12 years old the opportunity to fulfill a career. I think it's good for them. Growing up is a stage for learning and modeling is learning and that learning can always branch off into another career like acting. I think it's a free choice for the person because if they want a successful career they know how to go about it."

JUDY SEELY

"I don't think it's a good idea. They totally miss out on life. They may have a good career when they're young but when they get older they lose their appeal. If they start at 11 years old, by the time they're 18 they've lost the public appeal. I think it's exploiting the young."

PAULA SCISCIOLI
Junior

"I'm surprised at what they can do with makeup to change the image of a child into an adult. I think it's acceptable as long as the child model is mature enough to understand what she is getting herself into. She'll have the experience if she wants to follow modeling as a career."

DONNA RINGHOLZ
Junior

"I think that first of all it should be a decision between the girl and her parents concerning education and whether she's mature enough to handle it. Personally, I think it could be damaging because you miss out on a part of your life during the years that you model and you could regret this in later life."

CAROLYN BRAND
voice

"I think a girl should be a child before she's moved into the world of the grown-ups. I think the children that are models at a young age are maturing too fast and miss out on a real teenage life. It is good to be shown the adult world to some extent, but to have an adult life as a child forces too many decisions on the young mind. I don't think that the money makes it worthwhile."

MAUREEN BURNS
Sophomore

"I think that when children model adult clothes the adults think twice about buying them. They see how well a young girl looks in them and wonder if they will look as well. It's not right to put them in an adult world until they're ready to be that age. They should be children before they're adults. I think 19 or 20 are good ages for modeling for magazines like Cosmopolitan and Vogue."

Winners Circle

RapAround weekly will run a photo of a group of students taken somewhere in the diocese. One person will be circled and if that person brings the clipping to the Courier-Journal before noon of the Tuesday following our publication date, he or she will receive $5. This week's photo was taken of Cardinal Mooney students at hearing. The person circled should bring the clipping to Joan M. Smith, Courier-Journal, 114 South Union St., by noon, Tuesday, March 3 to receive $5.

Students Hear First Hand Report on Welfare Proposal

On Feb. 20, Bishop Matthew H. Clark along with six other Rochester religious leaders served on a panel that heard testimony on why New York State public assistance should be raised. According to school sources, among the 150 people in attendance there were 96 Cardinal Mooney seniors. These students take social justice or political science courses.

CSC, said that they went "to break down some of the myths of who really is on welfare."

Student reactions were mixed. According to Steven Suski, "America should help itself before giving aid to foreign countries." Others said the hearing only showed one side of the story and that they couldn't make an educated opinion until they saw the abuses of the system.

Chosen To Serve

The following Mercians have been selected from each class to serve on the new Campus Ministry Board. Freshmen representatives are: Chris Browne, Jackie Costello, Kathy Dacey, and Kris Solarek. Sophomores: Betsy Hoffman, Maria Mendola, Chris Reagan, and Miriam Vanderlaan. Juniors: Chris Elliott, Laura Bacher, Mary Doyle, Lynn Gauthier. Political science teacher Sister Marlene McQueeney, RSM, explained that the students went "to understand the legal, moral and personal opinions of the welfare issue."
