

'Old Age Is Able to Enrich World'

During the Holy Father's convalescence, the following is excerpted from an address given during an International Forum on Active Aging, Sept. 5, 1980.

All of you are intent on rendering homage to humanity in the aging, the elderly. The Church's concern and love for this category of persons invites her to take note of your zealous initiative. And today I willingly take the occasion to offer some partial considerations on a topic that you are rightfully striving to explore in depth.

A greater awareness in society of the existence of the elderly and of their condition of life is already a good in itself. A realization of the actual situation of millions of our fellow human beings immediately prompts us to see the need for promoting their betterment; it gives us insights into what interventions are to be made and what means are to be utilized so that many lives may be rendered more fully human.

To turn our attention to the aging is to realize how much they are a part of God's plan for the world, with their mission to fulfil, their unique contributions to make, their problems to solve, their burdens to bear. A concentration on the lofty dimensions of the lives of the elderly assists us to discover areas where true human advancement can be made; it helps us to see what should be emphasized in order to bring about progress in the present state of the elderly.

The Catholic Church willingly lends her support to efforts that encourage the elderly themselves to look with realism and serenity on the role that God has assigned to them: with the wisdom and experience of their lives they have entered a period of extraordinary grace, with new opportunities for prayer and union with God, having been endowed with new spiritual forces with which to serve others and to make a fervent offering of their lives to the Lord and Giver of Life. Efforts that are aimed at fostering and sponsoring programs on behalf of the elderly are worthy of the highest praise. Christ's teaching is clear: what is done for his brethren is done for him, and its value is seen in this light.

To help mobilize forces in favor of the aging is another worthy goal to be pursued: to support the initiatives that will bring the forces of science to alleviate the sufferings of the elderly; to defend their right to life and to the fullness thereof; to minister to their needs — all this is part of the horizon that is open to the men and women of our own day.

To proclaim the mission of the elderly and thereby to promote their special role in the human family is a task of great importance. The elderly are meant to be part of the social scene; their very existence gives an insight into God's creation and the functioning of society. The life of the aging helps to clarify a scale of human values; it shows the continuity of generations and marvellously demonstrates the interdependence of God's people. The elderly often have the charism to bridge generation gaps before they are made; how many children have found understanding and love in the eyes and words and caresses of the aging? And how many old people have willingly subscribed to the inspired word that "the crown of the aged is their children's children."

To point out the resources that belong to the elderly is to sensitize the elderly themselves and to highlight the riches inherent in society — riches which society does not appreciate. Old age is able to enrich the world through prayer and counsel, its presence enriches the home; its immense capacity for evangelization by word and example, and by activities eminently adapted to the talents of the elderly is a force for the Church of God yet to be thoroughly utilized. A description of the positive factors of aging could extend at length.

Your worthy aim, to see an "active aging" shared by men and women throughout the world. Interest begets interest. Creative activities for and with and by the elderly will bring forth fruitful results for a more humanized society and a renewed civilization that will sustain a greater fellowship of love and communion of hope and peace.

It is my fervent desire that your initiative and other similar ones may present the world with a more consolidated concern for the elderly everywhere.

In the context of the Catholic faith, my thoughts turn to all the elderly of the Church who with serenity and joy give example of earnest Christian living, while at the same time manifesting an appreciation of the mystery of human death, realistically to be accepted, but radically transformed in the Paschal Mystery of the Lord Jesus.

My thoughts go to all who are bent under the weight of sickness or incapacity, to those who shoulder the burdens of loneliness, rejection and fear. In prayer and with fraternal love, I entrust them all to the Heart of Jesus, source of all consolation, to the Heart of Jesus, our Life and Resurrection. And I ask God, through the intercession of our Blessed Mother Mary, to sustain you in your efforts, and to bless you and all those who love and assist the elderly.

Honorary Degrees Awarded

Sister Margaret Adelaide Owen, former administrator of St. Joseph's Hospital, Elmira, and Dr. Melvin A. Eggers, chancellor and president of Syracuse University, received honorary degrees at Nazareth College's 54th annual commencement exercises Sunday, May 17.

Sister Margaret Adelaide, a former member of the Nazareth College Board of Trustees, was honored for her "long and dedicated career as a nurse, administrator, teacher and particularly for leadership in numerous humanitarian and public health projects in the Southern Tier area," according to Robert A. Kidera, Nazareth president.

Santos Paper Awarded

Dr. Alvani Santos, medical director of the Cardiac Rehabilitation Program at St. Mary's Hospital, has been named the recipient of the 1981 Society of Internal Medicine Award of the Rochester Academy of Medicine. Dr. Santos received the award for a paper entitled "Orthostatic Hypertension: A commonly unrecognized cause of symptoms in Mitral Valve Prolapse."

He is well known as an author of articles and abstracts concerning the treatment of heart disease and has been honored both locally and nationally for his work.

A tour through the British Isles, hosted from Rochester, by HOMER BLISS

Nowhere else on earth is so much historical interest, pageantry and natural beauty compacted in such a small area as in the British Isles. After a stay in the great cosmopolitan capital of London comes a great variety of sights as we tour through the countryside... See Oxford, the great seat of learning — King Alfred's Winchester — secretive Stonehenge — Exeter and her great cathedral — Cornwall — the Cotswolds and Wales — Windermere and the Lake District — the Lochs and highlands of Scotland — Edinburgh and Shakespeare's Stratford.

IT'S THE FIRST PART OF THE "OUR FATHER" THEY DON'T KNOW

As for so many others around the world, for these people in India, "give us this day our daily bread" is an anguished cry for survival they know only too well.

What they don't know is that they can call God "Our Father" — that He has called us all His children — that whatever happens to us, happens with a view to His Kingdom of which all of us are heirs.

Will YOU teach them about our Heavenly Father? You can, by sending your gift to the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, supporting missionaries since 1822.

Yes, I want to help missionaries teach people the "Our Father." In addition to my prayers, enclosed is my sacrifice of:

$1,500 $1,000 $500 $250 $100 $50 $25 $10 $5 Other $ _____
