Looking for the Lord

How to Judge Judges

I'm uncomfortable about all those people who want Judge Sandra O'Connor to be quizzed about whether she is for or against abortion, for or against the Equal Rights Amendment, etc., to see whether she qualifies for appointment to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The word I used was "uncomfortable." Considering the length of time she will probably serve and the influence of the Supreme Court on the way we live, it seems right that such nominees should be examined very carefully. I would be reluctant to see whole categories of questions — such as those relating to the life issue — excluded from the hearings.

But it seems wrong to establish an ideological test for membership on this Court.

It may be naive, but it seems to me that the norms for such appointment are knowledge of and respect for constitutional law, a very good mind, great fairness and a lot of wisdom in applying the rule of law to the complexity of human situations.

I don't think we have all these qualities in some of the present Justices. Justice Brennan, for example, strikes me as a predictable liberal who is likely to decide for what he sees as the liberal position whenever he can.

Justice Rehnquist seems just the opposite, a predictable conservative who will support any conservative position he can.

If every appointment becomes a battle for an ideological majority, the whole concept of the role of the court, as a reasonably fair adjudicator of important disputes, will be lost.

Lord knows, I would oppose the appointment of any militant abortionist who was publicly committed to destroying any restriction on a mother's choice, using any opinion in which this position could be inserted.

But I would also oppose an anti-abortionist who approached the role of Supreme Court Justice with that intention. I view abortion as a direct attack on an innocent human life, but I don't think the function of the Supreme Court should be distorted to enforce my judgment.

In fact, this distortion is what seems to have happened in the decision which legalized abortion. A majority of the Justices seemed to conclude — for all kinds of reasons other than the merits of the case — that it was time to overrule the laws against abortion.

Once they decided what they should do, they had to come up with a legal justification, and it emerged as Justice Blackmun's tortured interpretation of the right to privacy.

From comments I've read, I gather that legal scholars recognize the Blackmun opinion as flawed jurisprudence. I would be content to have the court reverse it for that reason.

And I suspect that a non-ideological court, looking fairly and wisely at the law and at human situations, would be able to recognize the rights of legislatures to enact laws to protect innocent human life in the womb.

Of course, every Justice comes to the Court with a set of values, a body of experience, a particular education and a personal conscience. They are not legal computers.

But I think it's worthwhile to strive for the ideal of a non-ideological Supreme Court. In spite of many failures, that ideal seems to have served our nation well.

And if the ideal is abandoned, if we clearly and openly set up ideological criteria for nominees, somebody is going to lose. Pro-life people might win on this one and lose, under different circumstances, on the next several appointments.

It's one thing to face a decision with which you disagree because the Justices seem to have interpreted the law badly. It will tear the structure of our government apart if large groups are convinced that their values are being trampled because the Court has been stacked through political pressures.

Have a Priest In Your Family

It Only Costs $10 a Month

Did you know that, to attend but modestly to the needs of the faithful, there are 320,000 priests lacking here in South America?

As you are aware, the ability to finance the achievements of one's goal doesn't always accompany a vocation. And this is where you come in. Are you willing to give financial assistance to help a young apostle realize his dream?

Adopt one of our needy seminarians and have YOUR PRIEST who will pray for you daily, correspond with you regularly and whose priestly studies you can help to pay for with as little as $10 a month. Or, instead of paying by installments, persons of means may prefer to pay $1,000 once and for all. The boy himself pays a little and we complete the cost of his board and tuition and other expenses with donations from our benefactors.

Only $10 a month and one of our boys may prepare to give a lifetime to God and to his fellow countrymen.

IN FUNERAL SERVICE

AT THURSTON FUNERAL HOME INC.

John L. Lioi & William P. Cass II

Thurston Funeral Home Inc. Welcomes William Cass

and all the Cass friends and families to our new funeral home in Greece at 2636 Ridgeway Avenue. The Thurston Funeral Home Services will be further enhanced by the addition of Bill Cass as an associate.

WILLIAM P. CASS II

William Cass is a second-generation funeral director for Rochester families. Bill Cass' father, William Pomeroy Cass, established the Wynn and Cass Funeral Home in 1951 at 1429 Ridge Road (later known as the Cass Funeral Home). Mr. Cass Sr., was born and raised in Charlotte and is well-known to families all over Rochester.

In 1965, Bill Cass Jr., became a licensed funeral director and took over management of the firm in 1974 upon his father's retirement. The Cass family has long been known for their family-to-family personal service and Bill will be continuing these close personal relations at Thurston Funeral Home.

JOHN LIOI

John L. Lioi is also a second-generation funeral director. The Thurston Funeral Home Inc., began serving Rochester in 1962 under the direction of John's father, Anthony L. Lioi, and Louis D'Ovidio. John Lioi assumed the management role at Thurston in 1968.

Thurston Funeral Home relocated in 1980 in the town of Greece at 2636 Ridgeway to serve closely the families of Greece, Gates and Rochester.

Thurston Funeral Home is easily reached from the Ridgeway Avenue exit off Route 390.
