

Double Jubilee Noted by Assumption

This Saturday, Oct. 10, Assumption Parish in Fairport will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Father Kelly School of Religion and the arrival of the Mission Helpers of the Sacred Heart.

Bishop Matthew H. Clark will celebrate the jubilee Mass at 11 a.m. A reception in the school on Baumer Place will follow.

The school is named after Father Leonard A. Kelly, its founder. At the time of its opening the school was staffed by Father Kelly, his assistant pastor and four Mission Helpers of the Sacred Heart, the Baltimore, Md.-based congregation of catechists. They taught about 250 students.

Today's staff includes 48 lay teachers, three priests, five sisters, and about 50 helpers. Seventy-four classes are taught each week and more than 1150 students in 13 grades are served, most being instructed during school hours under the state's released-time program.

In addition, adult religious education classes in the form of teacher training courses are also taught by the Sisters.

Among those expected at the festivities are Msgr. Albert Schnacky, director of diocesan CCD in 1956; Sister M.

Msgr. Schnacky, the four founding Sisters, and Father Kelly watch as then Auxiliary Bishop Lawrence B. Casey hangs a crucifix on the walls of the school during its dedication ceremonies.

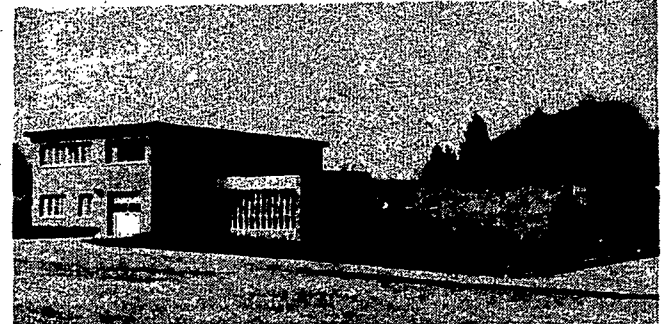

Maureen, the school's first principal; and Sister Mary Ita, president of the congregation.

Also expected are former teachers from Ohio and Connecticut and eight Sisters from the Baltimore motherhouse.

In addition to the bishop, celebrants at the Mass will be Father Kelly, Father John Norris, present pastor; Father

Daniel Hogan, associate; and several priests formerly associated with the parish.

Eat 2 Buns And Get Lots of Rest

According to a recent report in the New York Times, scientists have discovered that eating carbohydrates stimulates the brain to release a chemical called serotonin. Serotonin, in turn, makes a person sleepy, less sensitive to pain. In effect, carbohydrates act as a sedative.

Far be it from me to attempt to dull the thunder of the scientific community, but, gee, fellows, I've known the tranquilizing qualities of carbs for as long as — well, as long I've been a mother.

In fact, so well-versed am I in the restorative powers of carbohydrate consumption that I've worked out a little chart which I freely and gladly share with others so tested — uh, blessed — by parenthood.

Here it is, guaranteed to work, but if for some reason the listed dosages do not do the trick, simply double the consumption.

For Parents of Very Young Children

1. When a neighbor calls at 6 a.m. to report your child is outdoors on the swings without benefit of clothing — take one cinnamon bun (heavy on the frosting).
2. Toddler falls out tree requiring two stitches on chin — two Snickers bars (one each way to and from doctor's office).

3. Discovering hysterical babysitter terrorized by three-year-old — half a chocolate cake.

For Parents of Grade School Children

1. Finding rip in new winter jacket after first wearing — peanut butter and banana sandwich.
2. Bad language on the school bus — hot fudge sundae.
3. Substituting bawdy language for Christmas carols during church — one quart potato salad.

For Parents of High Schoolers

1. First driving lesson and later watching new licensee take car out alone on maiden voyage — pound bag of M&Ms (with peanuts).
2. Seeing child lying prone on soccer field — anything you can get your hands on.
3. Watching child being carried off field on stretcher — forget the carbs. Go for the brandy!

CHD GRANTS

Cephas-Attica and the Coalition for Safe Power have been awarded grants totalling $104,000 from the Campaign for Human Development. Bishop Matthew H. Clark and Francine Patella, coordinator of the diocesan campaign, were slated to present the checks today.
