A Day of Judgment Coming for Student Artists

Award sponsored by the Women's Council of the Memorial Art Gallery. In addition, senior portfolios in both art and photography will be selected to compete nationally for college scholarships.

The Scholastic Art Awards program was established 55 years ago for the purpose of recognizing and encouraging achievement by young artists.

It is sponsored by Scholastic, Inc., publishers of classroom magazines and instructional materials.

This year's show, which represents schools in the Central Western New York region, will be open to the public during Sibley's regular store hours, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Saturday.

Behind Every Team There Is a Manager

The job of manager for a sports team many times goes unnoticed. The student managers at Aquinas are proud of what they do, and know that in their own way they are contributing to the sports program.

Many people are unaware of what duties are included in the job. The managers, besides keeping score, recording team statistics, and keeping track of the equipment, also prepare the athletes for each game.

Mike Cerame, basketball team manager, tapes player ankles on game days. Mike is in his third year of managing and is also a trainer on the football team. He's well acquainted with basketball because he played the game in the CYO league.

Mike works at managing the team because "I'm thinking of becoming an athletic trainer," he said. His interest in that field started through Joe Lester, a teacher who encouraged Mike while he helped him with the football team. Last summer Mike worked at Red Wing Stadium as the visiting team's bat boy and had the opportunity to talk with other trainers.

Another student manager is junior Jeff Bierworth who helps manage the hockey team. Jeff has had his own share of hockey experience which makes his job easier.

Patriotism, Activity Recognized by Community

Kathy Przybycien of St. Agnes High School has been honored with two prestigious awards since the beginning of her senior year.

The first award was presented to her by the Daughters of the American Revolution. This organization asks seniors to choose one of their classmates who maintains America's ideals and its heritage. Kathy, who was chosen as a representative from St. Agnes, competed with 38 local high school students in a comprehensive written exam.

The test consisted of an autobiographical essay and one on how America's ideals and heritage can be maintained. On Oct. 6 the contestants were dinner guests of the Daughters of the American Revolution where Kathy received a pin and a certificate. She also met with the other students and talked about about themselves, the competition, and their concerns for the Rochester community.

The other award was given to her by the New York Farm Bureau which was based on service to the agricultural community, her high school, and her participation in other organizations. Kathy's past experience in 4-H, an Explorer's Dairy Coop, work on a dairy farm and maintenance and care for her own horse won her this Farm Bureau Award of Monroe County for Good Citizenship.

Kathy is a parishioner at St. Vincent de Paul parish in Churchville. She is active at the school's radio station WTNT as co-president and treasurer and is a member of the National Honor Society. Her plans after graduation include working and then attending Cornell University or Alfred Technical to study agricultural management.
