How involved should the U.S. become in El Salvador?

McQUAID

ROBERT ESPOSITO

"We shouldn't get militarily involved. If we send help, everyone will think: Vietnam. We should have the same policy as we want Russia to have about interfering in other countries, but we should keep an eye on it to watch for other outside help like from Russia; we have to protect the Monroe Doctrine. Plus I don't see harm in aid like food and medical supplies, but no guns or other weapons."

"I think we should limit our involvement there. We've had so much trouble with our religious missionaries being killed. Anything we do to get involved we're going to pay for. If other countries get involved we do have our responsibilities, but I don't think, however, our responsibility extends to sending a fighting military force. That will only cause more trouble."

FRANK TURK
Junior

"I think we should stay out of there. It's not any of our business. If we expect Russia to stay out of other countries like Afghanistan, we should keep our business out of El Salvador. I don't think it has much to do with communism. We're just sticking our noses where they don't belong."

MARK OUWEELEN
Senior
Student Government president

"I think we should get involved but not militarily. I wonder if anyone has entertained the idea of sending them food instead of guns. Most of the people down there would follow any political system that keeps them fed."

VICTOR DOUCETTE

"I think that we should send advisors to help them establish a democratic government but not try to make them have a government like ours. We should help them make a government for their people and not one modeled after ours. I would send a task force down to see the extent of guerrilla activity, but not to sway the outcome. The problems should be decided by the El Salvadorans."

MARK MURRAY
Junior

"Since we're a world power, it is an obligation for us to give aid to smaller countries that are under siege. I don't feel we should give extensive military aid if that's going to include a small armed force. They should have to solve their fighting problems themselves. Our country can give them what they need to use in their fight but if we start giving them extreme military aid, other countries will object, especially Russia. The power in El Salvador and those countries around it should be kept equal."

"I think we should get involved because we have a lot of concern with those nations down there. We're supposed to be a nation that all nations look up to. We just can't sit back and let them run wild. We have to do what we need to do to straighten out things, but I don't want another Vietnam situation. — it would be devastating. Send weapons but don't send troops unless absolutely necessary."

"I don't think it would be wise to get too involved. If there were a draft I certainly wouldn't want to go to El Salvador, although I'm not an authority on the subject so I wouldn't want to make statements. I wouldn't want to be involved in guerrilla warfare going on in Central or South America."

Stout in Running For Scholarship

Thomas Stout, a senior at Cardinal Mooney High School, has been named one of 500 finalists for a Jostens Foundation Scholarship. He is one of more than 12,000 high school students throughout the U.S. who applied for the award. The 140 scholarship winners will be announced this Spring. Selection of the finalists and winners is based on outstanding achievements in school and community affairs, academic excellence and meaningful work experiences.

The Citizens Scholarship Foundation of America, Manchester, N.H., as administrators for The Jostens Foundation Scholarship Program, has selected the finalists and will select the winners by mid-April. Finalists who do not receive scholarships will receive Certificates of Recognition.

Trip to Japan Possible

Nazareth Academy junior Ermelinda Bonaccio is looking forward to the possibility that her summer may be more than ordinary. She has been accepted as a semifinalist in the Japan/U.S. Exchange Program, conducted by Youth for Understanding. The purpose of the program is the cultural enrichment of U.S. high school students. Two high school juniors from each state will be selected to spend six weeks in Japan, free of charge. Ermelinda is one of 18 semifinalists.

Her overall average at school is 98 percent and she is editor of the Nazareth student newspaper, "The Gabriel." Ermelinda traveled to Binghamton for her interview by the selection committee on March 5 and last week received a letter from the committee commending her on her "appearance, sincerity, intelligence and ability to articulate (her) position on the questions asked."

She will be notified as to whether or not she will travel to Japan by the end of the month.

Young Adults Willing Donors

On Friday, March 26, the local American Red Cross Bloodmobile made its annual visit to Aquinas Institute. The entire gym was converted into a paramedical facility for the one-day operation.

According to Tom D'Agostino, co-director of donor resources for the Red Cross, high school students are very responsive in volunteering to donate. A law passed by the New York State legislature permits 17-year-olds to donate blood without parental permission.

According to Aquinas

sources, the 98,700 units of blood collected by the Red Cross supplies 45 hospitals in a 17-county area. Aquinas is one of 36 high schools in

Mercy Aids Missions

The hours of hard work put in by students at our Lady of Mercy High School paid off in successful Mission Days on Friday and Saturday, March 19-20. The event, which centered around a bazaar and spaghetti dinner, raised $14,000.

All proceeds are donated to the missions and according to Sister Mary Celeste, moderator for the Catholic Monroe County that participates in the program. High school students in the county contributed 4,000 units last year.

Schools Mission Crusade (CSMC), the sponsoring organization, the money will be sent all over the world. Some of the recipients are St. Joseph's Hospitality House in Rochester; a mission in Selma, Ala.; the Red Cloud Indian School; a Marist mission in New Guinea; a mission in Bangladesh; and the Sisters of Mercy mission in Chili, South America.
