Holy Rosary Diocesan School Demolished

The wrecking crew from L. M. Sessler Excavating had its hands full last week, tearing down the remains of Holy Rosary School, 420 Lexington Ave., devastated by fire a year ago. The structure was removed with the hope of possible reconstruction this Spring. As the school was destroyed, workers uncovered two cornerstones, full of the parishes beginnings. Above, a copy of a Catholic weekly with a photo promoting "The new Holy Rosary Church and School." Below, various lists of parishioners and graduating students were also found in the metal box, along with a picture of then pastor, Msgr. Arthur A. Hughes.
