Chris Coming Home

Christine Berl, the 13-year-old Irondequoit girl who underwent a bone marrow transplant last December in an effort to correct her severe aplastic anemia, is coming home.

Christine has been undergoing treatment in Boston since last November and is due home Good Friday, according to her uncle, James Holihan. He reports that the prognosis is now 50-50 but that his niece faces a long battle, of perhaps from two to five years.

Her environment must be as sterile as possible, her uncle explained, because her immunity system is weak. And she will still have to travel back to Boston weekly for checkups.

A fund has been established to assist:
