A Total Lenten Effort at DeSales

Geneva - Recently, students at DeSales Regional High School presented the House of Concern with a $71 check. The money was earned through twice-weekly collections of money saved by not buying junk food, or giving up a noon-time meal.

The contribution came as part of a three-fold Lenten program at the school which was coordinated by senior Margaret Toole. According to a school news release, in addition to alms-giving. students planned service projects and participated in special Masses which included visits from area priests.

Paul Bradley, a junior, headed the sub-committee

Also as part of the Lenten program, the school scheduled an unusual morning of study when all DeSales classes attended a special showing of "Gandhi," presented at the Geneva Cinema. Compositions were later prepared which discussed the Hindu leader's life of non-violence and selflessness.

Mercy Expands Computer Curriculum In an editor's note in for the past three years, this program. "Dial," the Public Broadcasting magazine, it was reported that there are more than 50,000 computer screens in the public schools and as many or more in the private schools. It also reported microcomputer makers saying that by 1985 school children will regularly turn to as many as 650,000 computers in their classrooms.

This September, Our Lady of Mercy High School will add its number to the prophecy. Although the school has had an elective computer course

Fall it will begin a three-year plan to address the need for computer literacy in the secondary school curriculum by establishing a computer literacy department. The department will deal with computer education on three levels of study, each with a different goal. The program's overall goal is to have every student at Mercy be computer-literate by the time of graduation. This month, for the first time, incoming freshmen were required to register for a ten-week

Keeping the Schools Operable

In the background, keeping the Catholic high schools running smoothly in all phases of operation, are the parent help groups which donate their time and energies. Above, Shirley Cooper, a member of the Aquinas Parents Association Occasional Help Committee, was on hand to help with the Aguinas Alumni Drive's mailing.

The Mercy program plans to follow the model set up by the Association of Mathematics Teachers of New York State. The first part of the curriculum, which requires minimum competency of all students, will provide every student with the opportunity to interact with computers and to do simple programming and problem-solving. In the Fall of 1984 the second phase of the program will begin with competency required of all math and science students through a semester course. This phase will have students using computers as learning and resource tools and to develop more useful programming skills.

Students Study The World

Bishop Kearney High School juniors and seniors, representing the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, participated in the Model United Nations program in March at Nazareth College. In preparation, they researched the role of Vietnam in the world and in the UN and submitted resolutions from their country based upon their research. The students learned parliamentary procedure, cooperation, and the value of compromise in reaching agreements.

Participants were Michael Bovard, Dave Brescia, Linda Keeler, Leslie Lee, Gretchen Luchsinger, Nancy Mickey, Michael Norton, Beth Palermo, Christopher Toombs, and Dave Trachtenburg. Donald Griffin of the BK faculty was

The following year Mercy will put into its curriculum other computer offerings including completion of Level III of the New York State Association of Math Teachers curriculum and topics from the Advanced Placement Computer Science course. This third phase will develop programming skills and will use more than one language, such as Basic and Pascal. Students completing this phase will be to prepare for the AP exam for college.

According to a school news release at least 15 more computers will be added to the existing five and a new lab will be established. Presently the Commodore 64 computer which has a built-in memory of 64K is being considered for the additional hardware. Expansion would take place for the next three years, adding more computers to the school and opening up a second lab.
