What do you think of civilian crime-fighting groups like the Guardian Angels?

McQUAID

KARL KANIA
Junior
football

"I think any group that there is no control over is bad for society because if there isn't control we don't know what they are doing. They can overstep their bounds and besides I think the courts of law know more about handling criminals."

AL SETTE
Sophomore
baseball

"I think if they work with the police they are good. Since they don't work for money and they know the streets they can work well with the people. If they start making their own rules there could be trouble. They should keep in close contact with city officials."

A.R. FANTACI
Senior
Student Government

"Well they are good as long as they are coordinated with the law enforcement agencies. If they lose touch with the police force and begin making their own rules, that is where the conflict comes."

ROD COOPER
track

"I admire their individuality and I like the way they present themselves. I like the way they speak up. They do brush up against the law but if they are really helping others it's okay."

ANDREY KUSHNIR
Sophomore
track and field

"Some people oppose them but I think they are good for society. They are setting a good example. A lot of times the police can't handle everything, so they are definitely a good backup for the police. They have to be well organized or it won't work."

JIM MacMILLAN
Junior

"I think they are good because instead of leading a life of crime they are helping people. The police can't do everything and they (crime-fighters) know the streets. I think they should work in cooperation with the police so there is supervision."

CHRIS MOSTYN
Freshman

"I think they are good. People need someone to stand up for them. They need someone to say we're not going to have this (crime). They are trying to help so people don't have to be scared to walk down the street or around the corner."

BRENT MATTHEWSON
football

"They are helping people so police don't have to do all the work. Instead of kids going in gangs to fight against the law they are fighting for the law."

Monroe Student Named Junior Of The Year

Last month 80 members of the Notre Dame Club of Rochester gathered at the University Club for the annual Universal Notre Dame Night.

Featured speaker for the evening was Thomas Mason; vice president for Business Affairs, who addressed this year's theme of "Young Alumni" by encouraging the Rochester Club to promote activities which would stimulate participation by recent graduates.

Club members also bestowed two prestigious awards. The Alumni Award of the Year went to Paul Reiter, a 1965 graduate of Notre Dame, who was cited for his many contributions to church, community and to Notre Dame, including service as past president of the Rochester Club. An attorney with the New York State Appellate Division, Reiter resides in the Town of Chili with his wife and two daughters.

Leigh Raymond was named this year's Junior of the Year for his superior achievement in academic and extra-curricular activities at Monroe High School. According to a club news release, Raymond is a straight

'A' honor course student and ranked in the 99th percentile in both the verbal and math components of the PSAT scores. A National Honor Society member, he is also active in the math, computer, track and cross country teams at Monroe.

The other nine finalists for the award, all of whom were considered on the basis of strong academic and extra-curricular credentials, were: Mary Catherine DeMarle, Cardinal Mooney; Thomas Giordano, Aquinas; Julie Husband, Greece-Olympia; Stacy Kaplan, Penfield; Richard Luss-Hilton and Scott Manly, Geneseo; Bradley Mitchell, Benjamin Franklin; Judith Yeaple, Marcus Whitman; and Andrew Zatyko, Pittsford-Mendon.

The Alumni Club also installed its new officers for this year. They are: Robert Kubiak, president; Tim Farrell, vice president; Jan Yurgealitis, secretary; John Lawton, treasurer.
