

Committee Airs Plan To Implement Pastoral In School Curriculums

By Joan M. Smith

The education curriculum subcommittee of the diocesan Challenge of Peace committee has been working on implementing the American bishops' pastoral, "The Challenge of Peace: God's Promise and Our Response," into school curriculums.

"How can we bring the pastoral to those from kindergarten age to those of college age?" and "What resources can be offered to high schools and colleges to help them implement the pastoral into the curriculum?" are two questions the subcommittee has been exploring since August, said committee member Sister Virginia Steinwachs, SSJ, assistant superintendent for Urban Education/Public Relations.

In its Tuesday, Oct. 11, meeting the committee formulated definite proposals for answering these questions. It was decided to develop six-week teaching modules that can be used in high school, youth ministry, and religious education programs. Also, because the committee wishes to make sure there is no duplication of material and effort, there will be a study of present curriculums such as in the sacramental and religion programs to discern how and where to implement the pastoral.

"The Church's social doctrines have always been in place, but not too well used," Sister Virginia said, and added, "therefore when we bring forth the pastoral people become afraid." She explained that parents wonder if children are being taught to be un-American. "This is not happening. Schools all along have taught Christian justice and peace," she said and urged people to read and study the bishops' pastoral.

To aid teachers and principals to adapt justice and peace subject matter to present curriculums a seminar is scheduled for

The new St. John of Rochester Church

St. John of Rochester Parish To Dedicate Church Building

Bishop Matthew H. Clark will preside at rites dedicating the new St.

John of Rochester Church, 5 p.m., Monday, Oct. 31.

Concelebrating will be Father Bernard F. Dollen, pastor, and Father Frank Falletta, associate pastor until last July. Deacon Robert Bourcy will assist.

All former associates have been invited to concelebrate. They are Fathers Roy J. Kiggins, John T. Reif, James E. Boyle, William Michatek and John V. Forni.

All priests of the diocese have been invited to a luncheon and tour Nov. 1; and a special Mass will be celebrated 7 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 2, the feast of All Souls, for those buried from St. John of Rochester.

For the latter, families of those deceased have been invited to attend the rites. Any family which has not received such an invitation is asked to call the rectory, 248-5993 as soon as possible.

School children will have special liturgies and parties on Nov. 3 and 5.

A parish dinner dance will be Friday, Nov. 4 at the Burgundy Basin Inn.

An open house is slated for ministers of the Perinton area churches and town officials, 2-4 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 6.

According to parish secretary, Kay McManus, "This week of joyful celebration will only be the beginning of many blessed years of grace in St. John of Rochester Church."

On the Right Side

An October Tour of The Diocese

It has been a long time since I toured the diocese, so when Eucharistic Day, a kind of spin-off from 40 hours, was in Owego, Sunday, Oct. 9, it gave me an occasion. Co-pastors Father Cason, to whom I am grateful for his kindness to my classmate Father Hester in Spencerport, and Father Watts, the high priest of Southern Tier charismatics, invited me to come, and I did.

It's almost 120 miles from Webster, so about 2:30 p.m., after putting some cassette tapes in the car, I left to stop first at my Auburn home, which is the residence of my nephew, Judge James Cuddy. I hit the jackpot. It was the 50th birthday of Laila Curtin, his Scrantonian wife, who is assistant to CCD director Vince DeWitt at Sacred Heart, Auburn. They have five girls and one boy -- all adults excepting nine-year-old Molly.

Next stop was at Groton, where my cousin, Father Bob Egan was having a family reunion with a roast sizzling in the back yard. So I met about 15 more relatives and connections, including Iretta Atkinson who has been a pillar of Sacred Heart for many years, and a great Legionaire of Mary.

About 5:15 p.m., the Owego rectory loomed forth. Eight priests were gathered, until Hurricane Freemesser roared in with Father John Quinn to make us ten. A fine dinner was served by the ladies of the parish. The traditional 40 hours devotion -- rosary, sermon, benediction -- was supplanted by Scripture readings and good musical selections. I met lector Genevieve Heffron afterward, who plans to join our tour of Ireland next May.

After services I phoned Father Foy in Waverly, 20 miles away, for a bed. Next morning I was pleased to meet Hornellian Sister Joanne Cullen at the 8 a.m. Mass. She is pastoral assistant.

Father William Burns, retired and in residence, was busy completing notes on a symposium called by Father Hogan at St. Patrick's, Elmira, for former assistants to the late Msgr. William Brien. Later reports indicate it is a pity that the symposium was not taped for history.

About 10 a.m. I phoned Father Adamski at St. Casimir's, Elmira, to join him at lunch, a time when priests are often free to receive visitors on the road. "Sorry, but I always go to my mother's in Rochester on Monday. She is failing. But do come again." Called Father Gaynor at Elmira Heights: "Please put on an extra plate."

Horseheads is en route. "Better pay my respects." From the movie "The Godfather," I have derived a healthy respect for respect. Father Bart O'Brien received me with his usual unctious. Associate Father Bonsignore was preparing for a week of retreat at the Dominican Monastery.

Father Paul McCabe phoned and we settled on my giving his annual Lourdes Novena in February. Then off to Elmira Heights, two miles away, for soup and sandwich with Fathers Gaynor, Tobin and Wheeland. After lunch we watched Cardinal Cooke's funeral on TV.
