As teenagers are you important to society, and are you taken seriously?

AQUINAS

MICHAEL SULLIVAN Sophomore swimmer

"Teenagers are taken lightly by most adults. I'm taken seriously in my house but I don't know if every teenager is. We are generally not listened to, but a lot of teenagers don't bother to express their opinions. As teenagers we don't have the responsibilities now but will have to start preparing for them. Things just don't come to you when you are 30 years old. It's like learning to drive. You automatically don't know your way around, you have to prepare for it.'

AMIE BOPREY Sophomore color guard

'I think if we want people to take us seriously we have to make them take us seriously. We just can't sit back and let adults do everything. We have to make ourselves heard. If teenagers make themselves heard, they can make an important contribution to society. I feel I am an important part of society.

We are important to society but we are not taken seriously. People still think of us as children because we haven't experienced anything; and so they figure we don't know what life is about. Teenagers can contribute a lot because we are the future leaders of society and the best way to prepare for the future is to experience as much of life as we can."

KELLY ENDRES Sophomore color guard

We are important to society but most people don't take us seriously. They don't feel we know enough to make judgments, but we are the people of the future. Yes, I feel important to society because I'm an individual.'

STEVE SUTTON Senior football

'Basically we are important. Right now we are learning and experiencing for the time when we have to make decisions. I think we are taken seriously to the extent that at 18 we could be drafted and can vote. I'd say our opinions aren't always respected because we don't have enough experience, but at least we are listened to. I think teenagers should have a sense of self-worth because we are contributing to society and soon we will be adults."

TONY LOTT Senior football

We are definitely important to society but we are not taken seriously until our help is mandatory. When we become 18 it's mandatory to register for the draft; but we are not considered important until we reach 18. I feel it is the way society is run. It doesn't recognize us until we are adults. Teenagers feel that they are important because although sometimes adults don't accept us we look on ourselves as mature persons.'

Computer Skills Expand

Joanne Bleier and Elizabeth Bauer and fellow classmates in the Office Education Programs at Cardinal Mooney are meeting the challenges of the electronic office as they execute commands to create, revise, store, retrieve and print copy on Olympia, EX100 word processors. The concept of storing data on diskettes and correcting errors on a visual screen is relatively new to students who are learning the basics of the machines operation.
