Budget Priority For Poor Asks Conference

Albany -- The State Catholic Conference has requested that the governor and the legislature give special attention to those in need in preparing the annual New York State Budget for the coming fiscal year. The state constitution requires a budget to be in place by April 1 of each year.

"In line with the State Catholic Conference's own legislative agenda which we are addressing this year on behalf of the poor and needy of our state, we have made several recommendations on both the program and revenue sides of the budget process," said Conference Executive Director J. Alan Davitt.

The conference sent recommendations to the governor and legislative leadership in both Senate and Assembly spelling out its program priorities in the protection of human life, and in education, health, and social concerns.

"We recognize that the budget is only part of the process in meeting social and employment needs in the state," Davitt said, "and we have been addressing all of these issues of special concern to the Catholic conference on an individual basis as the legislative session has progressed."

This is believed to be the first time that the conference has made specific suggestions based on the principles of distributive justice. It is of the utmost importance that the Church speak out on revenue measures which are not only effective to meet the needs of New York State government, but also just and equitable."

Copies of the letters and recommendations were distributed to the press only after they had been read on the hill.
