

Solve Jerusalem Problem, Pope John Paul II Asks

Vatican City (NC) — Pope John Paul II has reiterated his desire for international guarantees to protect Jerusalem as a city sacred to Jews, Moslems and Christians.

The papal message also supported a Middle East homeland for Palestinians and peace and security for Jews in Israel.

Prayers are needed for "a just solution to the problem of Jerusalem and of the Holy Land, and for the return of peace in the Middle East," said the pope in a Good Friday apostolic letter.

The 1,300-word letter, written in Latin, was dated April 20 and was published in L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper, on April 19.

The pope called an agreement over the status of Jerusalem "fundamental for a just peace in the Middle East."

"I am convinced," he said, "that to neglect to search for an adequate solution to the question of Jerusalem, so as to resign oneself to a postponement of the problem, only compromises further the hoped-for peaceful and equitable resolution of the crisis of the entire Middle East."

The pope called for international guarantees to protect the rights of all segments of Jerusalem's population.

"I dream of the day in which Jews, Christians and Moslems can exchange at Jerusalem the greeting of peace which Jesus gave to his disciples after his Resurrection from the dead: 'Peace be unto you,'" the pope said.

Pope John Paul said he would have liked to visit Jerusalem before the end of the Holy Year of Redemption on Easter, April 22.

"I would have desired to revive the deep emotion and immense joy experienced by my predecessor Pope Paul VI, when in 1964 he went to the Holy Land and to Jerusalem," said Pope John Paul.

Jerusalem ought to be a symbol of peace for humanity, but "unfortunately one has to recognize that Jerusalem remains a motive for enduring rivalry, for violence and for claims of exclusivity," he said.

Turning his attention to the whole of the Middle East, the pope said that the Jews in Israel have the right to "their desired safety and to the just tranquility which is the prerogative of every nation and the condition of life and of progress for every society."

The Palestinian people, said the pontiff, "who in that region find their historic roots and for decades have lived dispersed, have the natural right, by justice, to acquire a homeland and to be able to live in peace and tranquility with the other peoples of the region."

The letter was written "to the bishops, priests, Religious families and faithful of the whole Catholic Church about the city of Jerusalem, a gift sacred to all believers in God and the desired crossroads of peace for the peoples of the Middle East."

Current controversy over the status of Jerusalem stems from the 1980 Israeli decision to make an undivided Jerusalem the country's "united and eternal capital."

Arab countries have opposed the Israeli policy, saying that parts of Jerusalem should be returned to Jordan which lost them in the 1967 war with Israel. Arab countries have threatened economic and diplomatic reprisals against countries which recognize Jerusalem as the Israeli capital.

The Vatican also has opposed the Israeli decision.

Prior to the Israeli decision the Vatican said it opposed any unilateral action taken on Jerusalem, favoring instead an international agreement involving all interested parties.

Archbishop O'Connor said, "While there have been some fundamental differences, I find a great deal was clarified."

He said the administration "didn't change my mind" about covert aid, which he opposes, to anti-Sandinista rebels.

On the other hand, Archbishop O'Connor said, "It seems to me we got a pretty good idea of some constructive efforts the administration's trying to make to improve the situation in some countries" of Central America.

Cardinal Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago, who chaired the committee which drafted the 1983 bishops' pastoral on war and peace, said the bishops pushed for more initiatives to revive arms control talks and urged reconsideration of deployment of some strategic weapons systems.

"We had in mind systems like the MX," said Cardinal Bernardin, chairman of the bishops' Committee for Pro-Life Activities.

Asked if he thought the bishops were being used politically, Cardinal Bernardin responded, "Sure I'm aware of the fact that this is an election year, but life doesn't stop because we're going to have an election in November."

The meeting with the bishops was the fourth in three weeks that Reagan has held with Catholic groups or officials.

Reagan met with leaders of the Catholic Health Association at the White House April 4, addressed the New York Federation of Catholic School Parents on April 5 in New York City and accepted the diplomatic credentials of Archbishop Pio Laghi, Vatican pronuncio, at the White House April 13.

The White House said that attending the luncheon were Bishop Malone; Archbishop John L. May of St. Louis, NCCB vice president; Archbishop Thomas Kelly of Louisville, NCCB secretary; and Archbishop Edmund C. Szoka of Detroit, NCCB treasurer.

Also attending, according to the White House, were Cardinal Bernardin; Archbishop O'Connor; Archbishop Bernard F. Law of Boston, at-large member of the NCCB executive committee; Cardinal John Krol of Philadelphia; and Msgr. Daniel F. Hoye, NCCB-USCC general secretary.
