Pope Decries Expulsion Of Priests from Nicaragua

Vatican City (NG) -- Pope John Paul II on July 11 said he deplored the expulsion of 10 foreign priests from Nicaragua two days earlier and that the action added to the trials already suffered" by the church in Nicaragua.

He spoke about the expulsion at the end of a Wednesday morning general audience in St. Peter's Square,*

"I express my active de-ploring (of the action) and my intimate participation in the suffering of that church, 2x he said.

The pope told the crowd at the audience that he was asking God "to illumine the minds of the (government) authorities so that they will want to revoke this decision, which is openly harmful to the church and to the needs of the Catholic people of Nicaragua."

On July 9, Nicaragua's Sandinista government announced that it was expelling the priests because they planned to "provoke a confrontation between the church and the state."

The action followed a protest march led by Archbishop Miguel Obando Bravo of Managua in support of a Nicaraguan priest accused by the government of aiding rebels. The Washington Post reported that seven of the expelled priests participated in the march.

The expelled priests included four Spaniards, two Italians, two Costa Ricans, a Panamanian and a Canadian, the newspaper said.

Pope John Paul also called the Nicaraguan government action "a grave loss" for the Archdiocese of Managua, "whose clergy is not sufficiently numerous with respect

The church in Nicaragua, the pope observed, "continues, for its part, to carry out its own responsibility in promoting in the country the rejection of violence and in following the path of dialogue and of reconciliation."

The march was in support of Father Luis Amado Pena who was accused by the Nicaraguan government of anti-government activities and confined to a seminary outside Managua.

Archbishop Obando Bravo has described as fabrication a government videotape which purports to show Father Pena meeting with an alleged rebel agent and discussing anti-government activities. The government also purportedly filmed Father Pena carrying a suitcase containing hand grenades and other explosives, the Washington Post reported.
