

Now Playing At the White House: 'The Silent Scream'

Washington (NC) - White House officials, reiterating support for efforts to outlaw abortion, sponsored a screening for abortion opponents Feb. 12 of the film, "The Silent Scream," depicting a dismemberment abortion of a 12-week-old fetus.

The event came as pro-lifers announced they were distributing copies of "The Silent Scream" to all members of Congress and justices of the Supreme Court.

The briefing was attended by staff members of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops; the Rev. Jerry Falwell, founder of the Moral Majority; Dr. John Willke, president of the National Right to Life Committee; March for Life President Nellie Gray; and numerous other pro-lifers who packed a small auditorium in the Old Executive Office Building next to the White House.

"With this film, fresh new battle lines have been drawn," Dr. Bernard Nathanson, the film's narrator, told the briefing. Nathanson, who once directed an abortion clinic but now travels the country opposing abortions, said there has been little response to the film from abortion rights groups, probably because the "horrors" portrayed in it "are unanswerable and unforgivable."

Nathanson, at the briefing, said he was motivated to undertake "The Silent Scream" because of the criticism heaped upon President Reagan for suggesting that a fetus feels pain in abortion and the realization that most people do not understand oppression until they see evidence

-- such as photos -- "from the victim's point of view."

He said he was not involved in the actual abortion depicted in the film and that the procedure was carried out by a friend who decided, after viewing the film, never to perform another abortion.

Questioned about whether he has any financial gain coming from "The Silent Scream," Nathanson said he could perhaps receive royalties from his part in the film but expects that if he does most would be contributed to the pro-life movement.
