Holy Cross Readies Parish Visit Program

A parish visitation program, a census, is being planned for May 19 by Holy Cross Church. Some 4,800 residents of the Charlotte parish and adjoining areas will be visited by scores of workers under the general chairmanship of James Webber.

Father Thomas H. Wheeland, pastor; Father Peter Bayer, chancellor; and Father Rosario P LaDelfa, assistant pastor, are counseling Webber and his committees on communications, census card design, and home visitation. Father Wheeland has described the effort as "another extension of our 'Take a Second Look' program."

"We are now taking a second look at Holy Cross on our commitment to evangelization, not only during the Lenten season, but also year-round," he said. "We're emphasizing the spiritual renewal of the people and we're getting good results. We're taking a second look at the church building, and that's undergoing major renewal thanks to the dedication and support of our parish community."

He said, "Now we're going to take a second look at the parish and its people. We want to know our parish better and the people to know their church better. We want to know their needs and to satisfy them. We're eager to make sure about projections of church school population, about the elderly, about the handicapped, and about those with and without problems. It's our mission to serve. The information sought for the census will help us do that."

Father Wheeland said every home and apartment in the parish will be visited by canvassers, working under team leaders called "apostles" and doing the job as "disciples."

"They'll be out there talking to people and reassuring them of our goals.

I hope everyone will cooperate so we can do a better job for people," Father Wheeland said.
